4 Arrested In Pedestrian Drive; Auto Victim Dies

Woman, 70, Is Year's 27th Fatality; Two Children Hurt In Coaster Accidents

While police inaugurated a drive against violators of the new pedestrian control regulation, the death of a 70-year-old traffic victim was reported and two children were hurt seriously in coaster wagon accidents.

Four men were charged with violating the new jaywalking statute after orders for stricter enforcement were issued by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

John F. Sullivan, 23, of 331 Tenth street northwest and William H. McDuffie, 19, of 727 Seventh street southwest, were arrested at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, for violating the pedestrian control regulation.

Held Post $2 Collateral

They were stopped by Traffic Policeman W. W. Hill and taken to the First Precinct station. Both posted $2 collateral.

Hill said the men crossed G street against the green signal and failed to heed his warning whistle. He followed them across the intersection and along G street toward Thirteenth street before stopping them. He stated they refused to produce identification when he requested it and turned to look into a show window while he was talking to them. Sullivan forfeited his collateral, but his companion chose to stand trial.

The other arrests occurred at Ninth and F streets northwest, where Norman L. Knauss, 50, of the Atlas Building, and Stuart B. Marshall, 64, of 3008 Newark street northwest, were stopped by Policeman T. E. Watkins. Both men forfeited $2 at the Traffic Division.

Boy, 13, Injured

Maj. Brown stated yesterday that he had issued orders to see that the regulation was strictly enforced. He added he was convinced of the worth of the new law and intended to see that it got a fair trial.

Twelve-year-old Richard Carleton, 2021 Veazey street northwest, suffered a possible fractured skull and lacerations when struck by an automobile in the 4300 block Reno road northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital. Police said Richard was coasting when his wagon struck a stone, causing it to overturn. He was thrown into the path of an automobile.

Mrs. Ellen H. Imirie, 45, of Bethesda, Md., driver of the car, swerved her machine, but was unable to avoid the accident. She was not held.

Second Wagon Victim

The second coaster-wagon victim was James Allen King, colored, 10, of 2044 Bowen road southeast, who received a possible skull fracture when his wagon crashed into a telephone pole behind his home. He was riding with his brother Thomas, 9, who escaped injury. James was taken to Providence Hospital.

Meanwhile police reported the death of Mrs. Rose Cindoni, 70, of 718 Fifth street northwest, at Gallinger Hospital, of complications from a broken hip suffered April 7.

She was knocked down while crossing Fifth street in front of her home by an automobile operated, police said, by Milton P. Thomas, 721 First street northwest. He will appear before a coroner's jury.

Mrs. Cindoni's death raised the District traffic fatality toll to 27, two above the number at this time last year. Ten of the past eleven traffic victims have been pedestrians over 60.

Cabin Locked Against Crowd, Lindbergh Returns Home

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here tonight on the liner Aquitania on his first visit to his American homeland in more than a year. His cabin was locked against a curious throng, with police standing guard outside, as the ship docked.

Col. Lindbergh

The Aquitania was met down the bay by three Coast Guard cutters, one of which carried a detachment of Treasury and Secret Service agents, who went immediately to Lindbergh's quarters.

Agents to the line who went to the flier's cabin after the ship had arrived at the pier reported he wished to keep his customary silence, and had no statement to make.

Another passenger said Lindbergh and the former Barbara Hutton, estranged wife of the Danish Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow and like the aviator a voluntary exile from the United States, sat together for a time in the ship's lounge today.

Others said he kept to himself.

Krakauskas Chosen to Pitch Opening Game for Nats

Victor Lawrence (Joe) Krakauskas, bandy-legged rookie southpaw of the Washington pitching staff, yesterday was paired with Franklin D. Roosevelt as the Nats' opening day pitching team.

Apparently recovered from the peeve that found expression in the disgusted remark that, "It won't be Krakauskas," when asked for his opening game mound nominee Bucky Harris gave the blond southpaw the assignment yesterday.

But as matters stand the New York Yankees, who are scheduled to help the Nats launch the campaign Monday, will face a battery of cameramen, and then the Washington battery of Roosevelt, Krakky and Rick Ferrell. The President will pass up the opportunity of trying out his new delivery on the Yanks, and will merely make the time-honored first-ball pitch into the scrambled ranks of both teams. Krakauskas will take up the chucking burden at that point.

First Lady Regrets Passing Through Airport Picket Line

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 14.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt arrived in New York tonight expressing herself as "terribly sorry" to have had to pass through a picket line when she boarded the Eastern Air Lines plane at Washington. The President's wife explained that she had not known until she reached the airport in Washington that a strike was in process, as she had been too busy all day even to read a newspaper.

Mrs. Roosevelt

When Mrs. Roosevelt emerged from her plane three police officers surrounded her and escorted her to her car.

"I don't want any police escort," she said.

The three officers withdrew and the newspaper men questioned her.

"Did you know about the strike?" she was asked.

"Not until I was at the airport and it was too late to change my plans," said Mrs. Roosevelt.

"I was terribly sorry to have to go through a picket line, but I had engagements in New York this evening, and tomorrow I fly for Seattle for the birthday of my grandson, Curtis Dall, who will be 9 on Wednesday."

Ziegfeld's Daughter Discloses Troth to Dancing Master

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Beverly Hills, Calif., April 14.—It'll be a June wedding for pretty Patricia Ziegfeld, 22-year-old daughter of the late producer and his actress-wife, Billie Burke. The bridegroom will be William Stephenson, Hollywood dance instructor. The engagement was announced at a party here last night.

Two years ago Patricia was reported engaged to Ali Haggin, son of the Broadway society figure, Ben Ali Haggin.

Born in 1916, Patricia was 16 when her famous father died penniless in 1932. At that time her mother forsook the New York stage for Hollywood, taking Patricia with her. There Miss Burke rose to stardom. A few years ago she supervised the production of "The Great Ziegfeld," a film biography of her husband.

Patricia's wedding will take place about June 10 it was announced.

Miss Ziegfeld

When she was 14 Patricia made her stage debut with her mother in "The Truth Game." Shortly afterward Miss Burke sent the daughter of the "Glorifier of the American Girl" back to school. But four years later Patricia again was appearing in films.

House Acts To Speed Rail Relief

Chandler Measure Comes Up Monday With Rules Lifted; Speedy Action Seen

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

The Chandler railroad reorganization bill will be brought up in the House Monday for speedy action under procedure calling for suspension of rules and a two-thirds majority vote, Democratic leaders announced yesterday.

This is the first concrete step taken at this session to grant relief to the Nation's hard-pressed $26,000,000,000 rail industry. Chairman Lea of the House Interstate Commerce Committee said an omnibus rail bill would be submitted for action within probably two weeks.

A departure in railroad legislation, the Chandler bill permits railroads to reorganize voluntarily to reduce their outstanding securities and interest charges provided creditors and security holders having 25 per cent of the claims agree.

To Aid B. & O.

It is designed to aid the Baltimore & Ohio and several other big and small railroads to undergo reorganization without the expense of receivership or disruption of service. It will apply, however, to all railroads "in temporary financial difficulties and requiring temporary relief, but not so involved as to require thoroughly overhauling of their capital structures."

When a plan of reorganization is worked out, the railroad must submit it before a special court of three Federal judges and the Interstate Commerce Commission for approval within one year.

Speaker Bankhead said he would recognize Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Judiciary Committee, Monday to call the bill up under procedure limiting debate to 40 minutes before final vote.

House Majority Leader Rayburn, former chairman of the interstate commerce committee and an expert on rail legislation, said:

"Its object is to prevent railroads in temporary distress from suffering the great damage which a receivership necessarily causes.

Step in Railroad Aid

"Experience has shown that when a railroad enters bankruptcy or an equity receivership, it generally suffers great damage through the breakdown of the morale of its forces, the interference with or displacement of its management and its employes, the burden or unavoidable expenses of the reorganization litigation, and the blow to its credit. It is manifestly in the interest of all concerned to avoid these losses, if possible.

"I understand that the Baltimore and Ohio railroad has already complied with most of the provisions of the bill and will be prepared to take advantage of it as soon as it has become a law."

Rayburn pointed out that "equipment trust certificates, taxes, operating expenses, wages, employment contracts, unliquidated claims, and other similar obligations are

Andrews Says Public Wants No Pay Act Change

Atlanta, April 14 (AP).—Administrator Elmer F. Andrews predicted last night that if the wage and hour act "fails for any reason the people will demand, and probably get, a much more drastic measure."

"Experience to date," he told the Emory University Law Institute, "encourages us to believe that we are going to encounter no insurmountable difficulty."

The administrator added "I believe our principal task is going to be the policing of the marginal areas. It is the irresponsible operator, and especially the fugitive from State regulation, who has been causing our major headaches."

Roosevelt Foments 'Holy War,' Says Berlin; President, Hull Pledge Defense of Americas

U. S. Promises To Match 'Force With Force' in Any Aggression

See Editorial, "We Too Have a Stake," Page 8. The President's Text—Page 9.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday pledged to the 21 American Republics and Canada that peace in this hemisphere will be maintained against military or economic attack and that no American nation need surrender any fraction of its sovereign freedom.

Asserting there is a Pan American will for mutual defense as well as mutual peace, the President declared "we too have a stake in world affairs," and voiced hope that "our sister nations beyond the seas will break the bonds of the ideas which constrain them toward perpetual warfare."

President Roosevelt's address to the governing board of the Pan American Union, promising to match "force to force" against any attack on American institutions or independence and maintaining the right to "speak to the rest of the world," was broadcast in six languages.

Welcomed in London

There was welcome in London and Paris and prompt denunciation from Rome and Berlin for the speech.

Bulwarking the President's declarations, Secretary of State Hull last night reminded American Republics that attacking forces have been driven from the shores of this hemisphere in every contest since the era of liberation and declared "the Pan-American will is that similar forces shall never re-enter."

"The American Republics," said Hull, "have in clear and unmistakable terms expressed their determination to assure peace on this continent and to defend and maintain the independence and institutions of our people against any menace."

Like the President, Hull declared Pan-American conduct of international relations "gives the western hemisphere something definite and distinct to say to the world, peculiarly at this time of stress."

Thomas Praises Talk

At the Capitol, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, praised the President's speech as a reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine, and Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida said the President is trying "to feel our way toward some kind of helpful co-operation that will maintain world peace and order."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, outspoken critic of the Administration's foreign policy, declared, however, the President virtually invited some foreign

Venezuelan Widow Banned by France For Axis Sympathy

Biarritz, France, April 14 (INS).—For displaying sympathy with the Italo-German-Japanese triangle in her manner of apparel, Senora Margot de Topete, widow of a Venezuelan general, tonight was ordered to leave France at once. Senora de Topete caused a near-riot at the Biarritz Casino Wednesday night by wearing a jewelled belt bearing the inscription:

A group of enraged French society women ripped the belt from her. Police intercession saved her from even rougher treatment.

Jury Acquits Chavez Son-in-Law

Santa Fe, N. M., April 14 (AP).—Stanley Miller, former assistant Federal attorney and son-in-law of United States Senator Chavez, was acquitted with eight co-defendants by a Federal jury today of charges of conspiracy to make political use of WPA.

It was their second trial. A jury deadlocked last February, after it acquitted 14 others.

Forty-seven persons originally were named in the blanket indictment. One defendant died prior to the retrial, one pleaded guilty and the remainder were dismissed by the court on behalf of the Government.

Britain, Paris Seek Use of Soviet Planes

Anglo-Turkish Pact Reported a Certainty By London Officials

By the Associated Press.

London, April 14.—Great Britain and France were reported reliably tonight to be seeking an agreement with Russia by which the full force of her air fleet would be sent against anyone attacking them or their allies.

It was said in diplomatic quarters this scheme had been discussed in an important conference today between Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax and Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

The plan was reported to be a French idea proposed in the hope it would overcome differences which have arisen over Russia's co-operation with Britain's proposed European grand alliance.

Hopes for Early Pact

One British official held out hope for an early agreement by saying:

"There is no reason to believe that Russia may not join the alliance within the next few days."

Other developments included:

Both British and French officials were urging their new allies—Poland, Greece and Rumania—to enter into strategic military discussions as soon as possible.

Poles, Bucharest in Pact

Poland and Rumania have exchanged verbal pledges to unite in armed resistance to aggression by Germany or any possible German satellite, according to Saturday dispatches from Warsaw.

The two nations, allied since 1921 to protect their eastern frontiers against Soviet Russia, strengthened the alliance to apply to an attack from the west, and drafted strong defense plans.

The mutual pledges were exchanged between the Polish foreign minister, Col. Joseph Beck, and the Rumanian ambassador,

Italians Offer Yugoslav-Nazi Border Pledge

Propose to Guarantee German Frontier as Diverse Nation Unites

By the United Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, April 14.—High political sources tonight confirmed a report that Italy had offered to guarantee Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany.

The informants believed the offer might constitute Italy's final effort to block any alliance of Yugoslavia with the Western Powers. They noted that acceptance of the offer would provide Italy with insurance against any German advance toward the Adriatic. At the same time it would banish from the minds of Yugoslav statesmen the specter of such a fate as those of Albania and Czecho-Slovakia.

If Yugoslavia refuses to enter into a mutual frontier guarantee, informed observers believed, Italy may be obliged finally to co-operate with Germany in the dissolution of the country. Such an eventuality would give Germany a foothold on the strategic Adriatic Coast opposite Italy.

Offered in 1936

In 1936 Italy offered to guarantee Yugosalvia's northwest frontier with Austria.

The danger inherent in the diplomatic maneuvering appeared to be welding the country into a unity never achieved since the widely varying elements were joined as a nation after the World War.

Serbs, Croats and Slovenes were rallying to fuse the nation into a tri-partite union. In long negotiations the political leaders of the three folk groups laid the foundation for Yugoslav national front of which the facade will be the first real coalition government in the history of the country.

Roosevelt Hint at Third Term Seen in Mt. Vernon Speech

"In a time of real crisis and deep emergency" a man will accept the Presidency of the United States against his personal desires, President Roosevelt yesterday told a throng of notables at Mount Vernon, commemorating the 150th anniversary of George Washington's notification's of his election.

In a speech which many listeners accepted as containing a veiled hint that he might seek a third term, the President said he believed Washington would have refused the office "if the call had been a normal one." But on April 14, 1789, "the dangers that beset the young Nation were as real as though the very independence Washington had won for it had been threatened once more by foreign foes."

"So it came about that once more he put from him the life he loved so well and took upon himself the Presidency."

The ceremonies, conducted by the Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, commemorated the date when Charles Thomson, secretary of the Continental Congress for the 15 years of its existence, arrived at Mount Vernon with the notification of Washington's election by the first Congress.

Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, director general of the commission, read Thomson's notification and Washington's reply. Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union, welcomed the President and visitors.

Those who saw in the speech a third-term indication drew parallels from the President's remarks by substituting "Franklin D. Roosevelt" for "George Washington" and reading "Hyde Park" for "Mount Vernon."

'Meddler,' Say Nazis, Declaring Own Monroe Doctrine For Central Europe

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 14.—An officially inspired German commentary declared tonight that "War Agitator Roosevelt" wants to "open a 'holy crusade' against the German people."

The bitter reaction to President Roosevelt's Pan-American speech was published in Deutsche Dienst amid strong indications the United States was rapidly being given a place alongside Britain on the Nazi list of enemies.

"There is no necessity of arousing the American people with all kinds of devilish tricks of agitation into war fever against us," said the commentary, which was distributed by DNB, German official news agency.

"And Roosevelt would like to open a 'holy crusade' against the German people, even before it is declared.

Accused of Meddling

"For that reason, his 'cookie-pusher' diplomats already must wander around in full war regalia with gas masks in order to impart the creeps to the American people by force."

Foreign office circles earlier had accused Mr. Roosevelt of "meddling" in matters which didn't concern him.

Deutsche Dienst said that while Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler were endeavoring to "offset the unrest sowed by the western democracies through a new and just order in Europe, Roosevelt is seeking anew to support the tottering front of injustice by his hate."

"Roosevelt holds up Pan-American Union before European nations as an example of the national community of American lands," it continued.

"16 Armed Invasions"

"One asks: How can the head of a state express such nonsense?

"All the more so because the United States in the last 40 years alone has undertaken and carried out 16 armed and war-like invasions in Latin American countries."

Turning to the President's promise of help to Canada, Deutsche Dienst said it has not yet been forgotten it was the United States which "had annexation desires on Canada."

With Propaganda Minister Goebbels back after a vacation in the Near East, informed circles expected new vigor to be shown in the press campaign against the United States and Britain.

The Reich's expanding naval forces, meanwhile, prepared for war games next week almost under the guns of the British fortress at Gibraltar. A communique said, however, that this move had nothing to do with the current political situation.

Hitler's Birthday Thursday

Berlin serenely went ahead with preparations for Reichfuehrer Hitler's birthday celebration next Thursday. The chancellor is at his Berchtesgaden estate, where he undoubtedly received prompt reports on President Roosevelt's Pan American Union speech today.

(The President pledged American economic support to any American country threatened by "economic pressure" from abroad and condemned aggression as "criminal.")

The immediate reaction was that Roosevelt's statements were based

A. F. L. Would Kill Labor Act, Says Board

Proposed Changes Would Destroy Free Unions, Senators Told

Although conceding that four minor changes in the Wagner labor act might be acceptable, the National Labor Relations Board yesterday vigorously opposed any major modification, attacking in particular the bulk of amendments proposed by the American Federation of Labor.

In a 360-page report to the Senate Education and Labor Committee on proposed changes, the Board asserted that A. F. of L. suggestions for relaxing prohibitions against employers would increase rather than alleviate industrial strife, lead to a tremendous growth of company unions, and "in short destroy freedom of self-organization and restore many of the conditions prevailing before passage of the act."

Denies Favoring C. I. O.

With regard to four amendments suggested by the A. F. of L., the board reserved an "open mind" and said it felt they merited further consideration, "although objectionable in their present form." It said, however, it was "not persuaded by its experience that the act requires amendment at the present time."

The board denied it had favored the Congress of Industrial Organizations over the A. F. of L. Citing stastics, it asked for the privilege of presenting to the committee full facts concerning any case with regard to which such a contention is made.

One of the proposed changes which the board felt merited further consideration would permit employers to petition for certification of employe bargaining representatives. It warned, however, that to give employers the unlimited right to file such petitions "would open the election machinery of the act to possible abuse."

Other suggested changes would make more specific provisions for determining the appropriate employe bargaining unit; clarify the status of a contract where a majority of the membership of the contracting union, withdraws or shifts allegiance to another union, and increase from 5 to 10 days the time lapse between issuance of a complaint and the opening of hearings.

Except for these four, the board issued a sweeping condemnation of other proposed amendments, criticizing in detail changes proposed in the A. F. of L. bill introduced by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, and in the bill offered by Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska.

Other Highlights of Report

Other highlights in the report were:

The board expressed belief that validation of the act by the Supreme Court had greatly decreased employer resistance to recognition of collective bargaining and "has led to the virtual disappearance of the sit-down strike as a labor tactic." The sit-down, the board declared, "is predominantly an organizational weapon."

The warfare between the A. F. L. and the C. I. O., the board said, has inevitably led to industrial strife which otherwise would have been avoidable. The board, however, said it felt that the split in labor's ranks was "very possibly only a temporary phenomenon."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, in a radio address last night, declared that many of the amendments now before Congress would impair or destroy the labor act. He called upon workers and "fair-minded employers" to "look long and searchingly at every suggested change."

While labor is weakened by factional strife, he declared, "the minority opponents of labor's rights are united to destroy the labor act."

Joseph A. Padway, A. F. of L. general counsel, commenting on the report, said the board was "performing a tight-rope-walking act, but with very little skill." With regard to a board suggestion that any desired modifications might be effected through changes in administrative rules, he said the A. F. of L. could not trust the board to do this.

With regard to the A. F. of L. proposal that designation of a craft union as a collective bargaining group be made mandatory where craft units had representatives in plants, the board said this would make collective bargaining "impossibly complicated and wholly ineffective ,and in the great majority of cases would thwart, rather than carry out, the desires of employes."

Charges Called "Superficial"

Up to March 1, the Board Said, A. F. of L. unions petitioned the board for industrial units in 210 cases and for craft units in 100 cases.

The board described as "patently superficial" the charge that the labor act is one-sided. The act, the board said, partially balanced on behalf of workers for the first time the superior bargaining power of employers. For that reason, "no sound basis exists for the argument that the act must be 'eaqualized.'"

The board found particularly objectionable amendments which would permit employers to "counsel and advise" employes on union affairs, and make the closed shop and check-off illegal.

It asked permission to fie a second report in rebuttal of proposals advanced at hearings before the Senate committeee. It insisted the act had contributed to industrial peace and that, if permitted to proceed unhampered, there could be visualized a time when its work would be greatly curtailed because of general aceptance by employers.

Masons Here to Use Gavel That Dedicated U. S. Capitol

Washington Had It in His Own Hand In 1793; Lately It Has Been Kept In Georgetown Branch of Riggs Bank

A palpable symbol of its historic past will be used in 150th anniversary ceremonies this month by Potomac Lodge No. 5, F. A. A. M. It is a gavel used in Masonic ceremonies when the cornerstone of the Capitol was laid in 1793, and which has been used by seven Presidents since Washington first took it in hand.

Kept in a vault in the Georgetown branch of the Riggs Bank, the ancient gavel was taken out this week by Stephen T. Porter, grand master of the lodge, and chief of the District Fire Department. Its custodian is Richard P. Waddey, an official of the bank, and secretary of the lodge.

The first observance of the anniversary will be tomorrow, when the lodge, escorted by Potomac Commandery, No. 3, Knights Templar, will attend evening services at Georgetown Presbyterian Church, Thirty-first and P streets. The Rev. Ze Barney T. Phillips, chaplain of the United States Senate, will deliver the principal address. On Friday, April 21, there will be special ceremonies and a Masonic program in the lodge hall, 1210 Wisconsin avenue.

Originally known as Lodge No. 4 of Georgetown, Md., on the Patowmack River, Potomac Lodge was the first one in this area, its officers say. It was chartered by the Grand Lodge of Maryland on April 21, 1789, nine days before the inauguration of Washington in New York.

After its historic gavel was used at the cornerstone laying in 1793, President Washington presented it to Valentine eRintzel, master of the lodge. Since tht time it has been loaned for use at the cornerstone laying of many of the important buildings in the Capital.

Among its more historic moments have been when it was used by President James K. Polk, May 1, 1847, at the cornerstone laying of the Smithsonian Institution; on July 4, 1851, when Millard Fillmore used it at the extension of the Capitol; at the unveiling of the equestrian statue of Gen. Washington, February 22, 1860, when it was used by President James Buchanan; on December 14, 1899, by President William McKinley at the Washington Centennial services at Mount Vernon; at the Washington Sesquicentennial in Philadelphia on November 2, 1902, when it was used by President Theodore Roosevelt; at the laying of the cornerstone of All Souls Unitarian Church, February 13, 1913, when President William H. Taft used it; and when President Warren G. Harding officiated at the laying of the cornerstone of the Washington Victory Memorial on November 14, 1921.

War May Force Allies to Seize National's Securities in U. S.

The governments of Grfeat Britain and France, in case war should break out, probably would seize immediately the American securities owned by their nationals to prevent possible panicky selling, authoritative sources said yesterday.

At the same time, Administration officials denied emphatically that any plan was under consideration whereby these governments would take over American securities held by their nationals.

Replying to a report published by a New York newspaper that the country's investment trust leaders had been asked to join in such an agreement, officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Treasury said no such proposal had been advanced here.

Persons familiar with what happened at the outbreak of the World War in 1914, however, feel that the British and French governments, and possibly others, would not again be caught napping as they were on that occasion. Instead of permitting possible heavy liquidation to take place, it is believed, they would seize holdings immediately.

This conclusion is based on logic, many experts feel, and thus has no relation to any proposals which might be advanced in the course of anticipated cooperation between the British, the French and the United States.

Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, will address the Political Study Club today on "War or Peace." The meeting will be at the Washington Club at 2:30 p. m., with the president, Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, presiding. Miss Alice Hutchins Drake is in charge of the program.

New Stoker Is Complete Heat-Producing Unit

The stoker for the first time becomes a complete heat-producing unit, with the introduction of new "room-heatmakers." Up to now, coal stokers have been built as attachments for furnaces. Newly announced developments make the stoker a complete converter of heat.

The new type equipment is a combination automatic coal stoker, room furnace, forward circulator and humidifier. It is a complete automatically fired furnace, which, with its streamlined housing, is placed in the living quarters. The new heatmakers are equipped with electric instruments which govern the output of heat both day and night.

Horner Names Adviser to Seat Left by Lewis

Slattery Promises Full Support To Administration

Chicago, April 14.—James M. Slattery, close adviser of Gov. Horner and chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, accepted his appointment to the United States Senate today with a pledge of support for the "the great humanitarian principles and objectives of the Democratic National Administration."

The Governor selected the new Senator—a stocky, soft-spoken man of 60—to fill the seat vacated Sunday by the death of the picturesque Senator James Hamilton Lewis.

He will hold the post until November, 1940, when a Senator to serve the balance of the Lewis term, extending to 1942, will be chosen in a general election.

Asked if the appointment meant he would be candidate then, he replied:

"Presumably it does, but let's wait and see."

Slattery assumed an important position in Democratic ranks in 1936. At that time he managed the Cook County (Chicago) phase of Gov. Horner's campaign for renomination. He also directed the campaign of Senator Scott W. Lucas in the same bailiwick last year. In both primaries the Horner forces defeated aspirants backed by the Chicago organization of Mayor J. Kelly and National Committeeman P. A. Nash.

Slattery had a hand in adjusting differences between the party's factions subsequently and supported Mayor Kelly's successful bid for re-election April 4.

Cut Utility Rates

"It shall be my aim to merit the trust placed in me by Gov. Horner by striving to represent the people in the same sincere and conscientious manner as that which marked the service of my distinguished predecessor, the late Senator Lewis," Slattery stated today.

"I intend, as Senator from Illinois, to do all in my power to help advance the great humanitarian principles and objectives of the Democratic National Administration."

In his three years as head of the commerce commission reductions in utility rates representing a saving of $23,000,000 a year to Illinois consumers have been effected.

In the period between November 27 and April 9, when Gov. Horner was ill in Florida, Slattery was a member of the four-man "regency" which worked with Acting Gov. Steele in conducting the State's business.

Horner, in a statement issued at Springfield, said Slattery "has demonstrated his devotion to the public welfare" and was "eminently qualified" for his new duties."

Slatterly told reporters he would remain in Illinois until a new commerce commission chief had been named.

The new Senator, father of 11 children, has not had time to complete plans for establishing a residence in Washington. His first wife, Mrs. Mamie Alice Beever Slatterly, died in 1933. He married Miss Ruth Anderson later.

Slatterly was born July 24, 1878. He was raised in the "Archey road" neighborhood—the Archer avenue district on Chicago's southwest side made famous by the stories of Peter Finley Dunne.

He attended a parochial school, St. Ignatius High School and the Illinois College of Law. He was instructor in contract law at the college from 1909 to 1912 and for the next two years served as secretary of the Webster College of Law—then headed by James Hamilton Lewis.

Ickes Approves Choice

Secretary Ickes yesterday congratulated Senator-designate Slattery (Democrat), Illinois, on his "wonderful opportunity to carry forward the liberal policies" of the late James Hamilton Lewis.

"I wish him every success," Ickes added in a prepared statement on Gov. Horner's appointment of Slatlate James Hamilton Lewis."

The Secretary, an Illinoisan, said that in naming Slattery, Horner selected "a fine citizen and an outstanding lawyer who has an excellent record in the administration of the Illinois Commerce Commission."

Minton Scheduled to Succeed Lewis As Senate Whip; Dies Subject of Attack

By International News Service.

Senator Minton, "New Deal" Democrat from Indiana, last night appeared certain of election as majority whip of the Senate to succeed the late Senator Lewis of Illinois.

SEN. MINTON

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic leader, disclosed he will call a conference of the Democratic members of the Senate next week to choose a new whip.

While Minton is classified as a 100 per cent "New Dealer" and invariably votes to support President Roosevelt, conservative Democrats said they would offer no opposition to his election. Minton was assistant to Senator Lewis in his term as "whip."

Representative Osmers, youngest Republican in the House, proposed yesterday that in event of a foreign war the President, Vice President, Cabinet members and members of Congress who voted for war should be the first ordered into front-line trenches.

The New Jersey Congressman, who is serving his first term, introduced a bill proposing also that industrialists and bankers who profit from war should be forced to shoulder arms.

Methods used by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, in conduct of the House un-American activities investigation were called "undemocratic" and "unfair" yesterday in a letter sent him by the American Association of University Women. The association claims a membership of 64,000.

The letter was signed by the association's president, Margaret S. Morriss, dean of the women's college at Brown University.

It said, in part: "The American Association of University Women wishes to protest strongly against the un-democratic methods employed by the House Committee on un-American activities under your chairmanship in, condemning citizens and groups of citizens as subversive without giving them an opportunity to be heard.

"This procedure, if continued, would go far to nullify civil liberties and would be destructive to that democracy for which we all care."

A score of members of the House of Representatives, including Speaker Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama; Marjority Leader Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, and chairmen of major committees were guests yesterday at a luncheon in honor of Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri.

Their host was Representative Cannon (Democrat), Missouri. Eight other Missouri members of Congress also attended. Absent were Senators Truman and Clark, four Missouri Representatives.

Representative Seger (Republican), New Jersey, returned to his office yesterday after recovering from an attack of influenza with which he was stricken January 19.

Legal Rulings Upset Cotton Subsidy Plan

Appropriation, Farm Law Changes Needed, Administration Told

By the Associated Press.

Agricultural administration lawyers were reported yesterday to have ruled that a change in the 1938 farm law as well as a Congressional appropriation would be necessary before the administration could carry out its proposal to subsidize exports of cotton from its loan stocks.

Legal advisers are said to have informed Secretary Wallace they believed the 1938 law barred release of Government loan stocks before August 1.

This development sent Wallace and Agriculture Department advisers to Capitol Hill for a conference with Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, and Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama.

Wouldn't Depress Prices

The Administration already was confronted by strong opposition to the cotton export lpan in the Senate, but some officials had been of the opinion it could be carried out without further legislation. Officials had indicated, however, that the program would not be put into effect without Congress' approval.

Meanwhile, the State Department advised farmers that the Administration-backed scheme to barter surplus American cotton and wheat to the European democracies for such strategic war materials as rubber and tin would not be allowed to depress prices of farm products in this country.

In a statement, the Department said the Administration "was not seeking to press American suplies into world markets." It emphasized that any stocks bartered would serve only as war reserves and would be used only in the event prices advanced to a fixed level.

Would Relieve Farmers

Administration hopes of winning Congressional backing for the cotton subsidy proposal weakened as a consequence of discovery of the possible legal barrier.

The Government could subsidize exports of cotton not under loan, but supplies outside loan stocks are very low and will not agumented until the new crop is harvested this fall. More than 11,300,000 bales are stored in warehouses under loan.

The export plan, suggested by President Roosevelt, provides for farmer-borrowers to receive $1.25 a bale for selling to exporters title to cotton pledged under loan. The exporter then would acquire the cotton by paying the Government a set price, perhaps equivalent to current domestic prices. The Government then would mark the farmer's obligation paid. In addition, it would pay exporters a bounty of from one to three cents a pound on all sales abroad.

Florida Canal Bill Approved In Committee

$200,000,000 Project Is Passed Along With Omnibus Act

By International News Service.

The long-disputed $200,000,000 Florida ship canal project yesterday was approved by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, 10 to 6, along with an omnibus rivers and harbors bill totaling $69,000,000.

Hailed as a victory for President Roosevelt, the action on the canal came after a bitter fight. The canal is to cross northern Florida, to connect the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. Proponents claim it will shorten the shipping route and would be an asset for national defense. Opponents said it would ruin the State's underground water supply.

President Roosevelt allocated around $15,000,000 in WPA money to the project early in his Administration but called Congress to authorize the project before making any more advances.

Approved in the rivers and harbors improvement bill were the $25,900,000 Calument-Sag Harbor project in Indiana and Illinois; expenditure of $10,290,000 on the Mississippi between the Ohio and Missouri Rivers; $8,500,000 on the Guadalupe River, Texas; $5,000,000 on the Louisiana and Texas intracoastal waterway from New Orleans to Corpus Christi, and $4,200,000 on the Mississpp below New Orleans.

Acton was deferred on a $12,000,000 project for the Connecticut River.

Newsom to Pitch For Browns Today

St. Louis, April 14 (AP).—At least two new faces will be seen in the St. Louis Browns' lineup as the club takes the field tomorrow against the Cardinals in the first of their two-game city series.

Johnny Berardino, brought up from San Antonio, will be at second base, and Myril Hoag, obtained in a trade with the Yankees, will be in right field.

Buck Newsom, Ed Cole, and either Russ Van Atta or Ewald Pyle will hurl, Manager Fred Haney said.

The Browns engaged in a long hitting drill at sportsman's Park after their arrival this morning from their spring training tour in which they won 15 out of 23 exhibition contests.

Byrnes Drafts New Works, Pension Bill

Most U. S. Construction Would Be Under Independent Agency

A revised edition of his bill consolidating Federal public works agencies and liberalizing the social security laws was presented yesterday by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to the special committee on unemployment and relief, with every prospect that it will be offered to the Senate early next week.

Designed to meet objections aroused by the original draft, the measure now makes provision for white collar WPA workers, omits transfer of the United States Employment Service from the Labor Department to the Social Security Board and unites most Government public works bureaus in an independent agency instead of an executive department.

At its two-hour session yesterday, the committee discussed only the public works' section of the bill, leaving the social security amendments for today.

Agency Held Less Costly

The new Public Works Agency would be under Civil Service, but the question of whether merit system provisions would extend only to administrative employes was still in disagreement.

As it stands, the bill would establish a public works agency with a $10,000-a-year administrator. The agency would include present functions of WPA, PWA, CCC, NYA, the public buildings branch of the Treasury and the Bureau of Public Roads. Senator Byrnes pointed out that an agency would be less costly to set up than a department.

Provision is made not only for construction work but also for training of youth and retraining of adults.

States Must Pay Too

States would be required to put up at least one-third of the total cost of all projects within each State—as compared to the present average of 17 per cent for WPA and 55 per cent for PWA projects.

In no case would the Federal Government be permitted to sponsor projects without State participation.

The bill guarantees prevailing wages on construction projects, with wage standards lower than those fixed by the wage-hour act.

Pensions in 1940

Controversy developed yesterday on the grounds that industrial States would not receive their fair share of projects. Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, proposed to distribute aid to States in terms of jobs instead of money, pointing out that the same amount of money will employ fewer persons in the North than in the South.

The bill would liberalize social security laws by advancing the date when old-age insurance payments begin from 1942 to 1940; would increase unemployment compensation and benefits to the aged, blind and dependent children, and would establish a new category of governmentally-aided "handicapped individuals" ineligible for other assistance and "unable to perform substantial gainful employment."

Meanwhile, the President signed the $100,000,000 emergency relief appropriation to carry WPA to July 1. A presidential request of $1,500,000,000 for WPA for the fiscal year 1940 is expected in a few days.

'Boys' Town' in Kensington Started by D. C. Clergyman

"Eddie" Daymude, first member of the proposed "Boy's Town" colony, is shown with the Rev. H. Wade Safford, rector and organizer of the project at Kensington

Rev. D. Wade Safford, Former Epiphany Curate, and Eight Boy Proteges Form Nucleus of Colony

In the frame rectory of Christ Episcopal Church, Kensington, a native Washingtonian is laying the groundwork for an experiment which may become a counterpart of Father Flanagan's famed "Boys' Town." There the Rev. D. Wade Safford, once Epiphany curate, has eight lads of the community, from twelve to sixteen years in age, under his care and is directing their energies into constructive channels through co-operative activity in a spiritual atmosphere.

The youngsters assume responsibility for all the chores at the rectory, including cooking, dishwashing, bedmaking, washing and ironing, shopping and cleaning, and also raise chickens.

The Rev. Mr. Safford, who launched the enterprise in January after contemplating the idea since graduation from Dartmouth in 1930, explained yesterday that his greatest present need is a farm, preferably in or near Kensington. He said he believed the boys would achieve more success in "staying close to the soil."

Religious Atmosphere

Much of the daily program of "Boys' Town" revolves around the chapel on the second floor of the rectory, where, in line with the rector's theory that all education should have a spiritual basis, services are held before breakfast, dinner and the 9 p. m. curfew.

Thirteen-year-old Gene Daymude is sacrister of the chapel, which was blessed recently by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and dedicated by Dean Powell of the Cathedral. Altar brasses were donated by Mrs. Joseph Fletcher, widow of Canon Fletcher of the Cathedral, and tht altar was constructed by Walter Scott Pratt, son of the senior warden of the church.

The project was launched with a gift of $100 from a prominent local woman and a later donation of $500 from a Cincinnati woman.

There has been much change in the general attitude of the lads since they became members of the colony, the Rev. Mr. Safford says. None of the boys now smokes and all strictly observe the 9-o'clock curfew, he says, smilingly adding that "they will persist in chattering after 'lights out.'"

Members of Colony

In addition to Gene Daymude and his brother, Eddie, the colony includes Billy Rhine, 12; Carroll Carter, 14; James Rawlings, 16; Maynard "Monk" Hawkins, 16; James "Jumbo" Hawkins, 14, and Joseph Miller, 13. More than twelve other Kensington boys drop in daily to take part in the programs.

According to the Rev. Mr. Safford, the enterprise is receiving splendid support, not only from his own congregation, but also from other Kensington organizations, including the Ladies Aid Society of St. James' Chapel, Garrett Park, which contributes four quarts of milk daily. His parishioners unanimously approved the project at a meeting last fall.

Last Tuesday, as a reward for their interest in Holy Week observance, the boys were taken on a trip over the Skyline drive. They are now planning a summer trip and have purchased two tents, having been invited to spend two weeks on a farm in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The Rev. Mr. Safford is the son of the late Dr. William Edmund Safford, former economic botanist in the Department of Agriculture. His mother lives at 3339 Mount Pleasant street northwest.

Elliott Denies He Meant to Back Garner

Quits Hearst Chain; Has 'Correction Period' To Straighten Record

By the United Press.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 14.—Elliott Roosevelt, who earlier had announced his retirement as president of Hearst Radio, Inc., tonight explained his recent broadcast criticisms of the New Deal.

In a semi-weekly news commentary over his own Texas State network, the Nation's largest regional one, he spoke in a "correction period." His remarks, he said, were for "keeping the record straight." In so doing, he denied he advocated the candidacy of Vice President Garner or anyone else for President; or that his attacks on the Administration which his father heads were "in the spirit of hatred, distrust or of questioning the sincerity of anyone."

Roosevelt said he would advocate no Presidential candidate "until the Democratic convention of 1940 has selected a candidate." Remarks about Garner "being in the driver's seat" he said, were those of a reporter relaying the results of a popularity poll. But they had been branded erroneously, he said, as advocacy of Garner.

Helpful Questioning

"In those interpretations my loyalty to the Administration was questioned," he said. "May I repeat here and now, that those who question my loyalty to the Administration do so without foundation in fact. If I question an Administration program or policy, I do so in the spirit that what information I have gleaned in the South may be helpful to the Administration—and not in the spirit of hatred, distrust or of questioning the sincerity of anyone."

Roosevelt said his commentaries on the Federal Government's stands on economic conditions of the South; freight rates; regulation of the oil industry, and agricultural program and policies "have not been intended as my own personal criticism, but an effort to reflect the opinions of those persons with whom I come in contact."

"And at no time," he said, "have I reflected those opinions without the offer of suggestions I felt to be constructive— suggestions that have reflected not my opinion alone, but a consensus."

Also Quits as Director

Young Roosevelt, made president of the once widespread Hearst radio interests in 1936, asked the board of directors that his resignation be made effective tomorrow. He felt "under the circumstances" that he could be "of little further service to the organization." He also resigned as a director.

He has devoted almost all his time in recent months to the Texas network, of 23 stations, which he started September 15, 1938, as president. Remaining stations owned by William Randolph Hearst, the newspaper publisher, are WCAE, Pittsburgh; WBAL, Baltimore; WISN, Milwaukee, and KYA, San Francisco.

National Mine Shutdown Feared As Violence, Shortage Appear

By International News Service.

New York, April 14.—With contract negotiations for the Appalachian soft coal industry in continued deadlock here, amid a growing atmosphere of bitterness and distrust, Nation-wide suspension of coal mining, with inevitable suffering and curtailment of normal activities, became an active threat tonight.

Late today the operators offered a new proposal which recognized the United Mine Workers Union as exclusive bargaining agency for the affected miners, but refusing to accede to union demands for a closed shop.

President John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. rejected the proposal, saying:

"The operators are making a great virtue of giving us something we already have. We are already the exclusive bargaining agency."

Violence broke out in several coal centers. Appeals from essential industries, and appeals that the defense of the Nation is endangered failed to shake representatives of 338,000 United Mine Workers and 2,000 operators in the eight-State area.

Appeal was made on behalf of the New York Shipping Corporation, of Camden, N. J., which faces a shutdown of work on one battleship, two destroyer tenders and two seaplane tenders unless the company is allowed to purchase coal by April 22.

A dynamite explosion closed the entrance of a mine near Pittsburgh and several disorders marked the fourteenth day of the shutdown in that area.

Nonunion mines in Clincho, Va., were closed down as hundreds of United Mine Workers from three States converged there for an organization rally. There were several fist fights, and a colored nonunion miner was shot but not dangerously wounded.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia asked Lewis, spokesman at the conference here, to keep in close touch with him. He has said the city might be forced to buy or lease a mine to prevent a halt in service of New York's rapid transit system.

Tomorrow Lewis must decide whether to give the required 15-day notice abrogating anthracite union contracts, which expire April 30. This would have the effect of extending the present tieup to the entire Nation.

Spokesmen tonight discussed the deadlock bitterly, each side blaming the other. Lewis calls the situation a lockout. O'Neill terms it a strike.

Government officials in Washington arranged yesterday to divide all soft coal among the Government heating plants, schools and hospitals. They estimated that there is enough coal available to last until May 1, perhaps longer if the weather is warm.

Pittsburgh, April 14 (U.P.).—Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, shut down because of the bituminous mining "holiday," today failed to pay an estimated $57,000 in back wages to 1,400 miners who gathered at its there mines to collect their "life-saving" checks for work in the second two weeks of March.

Senate Body Approves 2 ICC Nominees

Alldredge and Lee Unanimously Backed By Sub-committee

J. Haden Alldredge, of Alabama, and William E. Lee, of Idaho, were unanimously approved as commissioners of the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by a Senate sub-committee, as reports circulated through the Capitol that President Roosevelt might name former Gov. Elmer A. Benson, of Minnesota, to fill the remaining vacancy on the ICC.

The sub-committee delayed acting on the Alldredge and Lee appointments until former Representative Thomas R. Amlie, of Wisconsin, also appointed to the ICC, had been withdrawn as a candidate. Amlie, who asked the President to withdraw his name early this week, had been opposed because of allegedly Socialistic views. Te was generally conceded he would not have been confirmed by the Senate.

It is understood that, in his letter of withdrawal, Amlie denounced the storm of disapproval aroused by his appointment as an unwarranted attack on minority rights.

Observers thought that if the President named Benson to the post, a similar uproar would be evoked on the grounds that Benson, a Farmer-Laborite, also holds "radical" opinions.

Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, one of the members of the five-man sub-committee, had indicated opposition to Alldredge because of the latter's advocacy of elimination of freight-rate differentials. However, Reed agreed to vote the same way as his Republican colleague on the sub-committee, Senator Austin, of Vermont.

Lee, whose term expired this year, has been an ICC commissioner since 1930.

Hotel Workers Accept Agent

Employes of Lafayette and Continental Hotels in an NLRB election yesterday approved the Joint Executive Board of three A. F. L. hotel unions as their bargaining agent, according to W. M. Aicher, NLRB regional director, who supervised the balloting.

Earlier in the week similar action was taken by employes of the Raleigh, Roger Smith, Ambassador, and Willard Hotels. Seven more elections will be held next week as part of the agreement which ended the recent hotels' strike.

Boy Descendant Of Clipper Designer To Launch C-2 Ship

By the Associated Press.

Seven-year-old Donald McKay, great-great-grandson and namesake of a famous designer of the original American clipper ships, will sponsor the first of the maritime commission's new C-2 cargo vessels, the commission announced yesterday.

The vessel, the Donald McKay, will be launched next Saturday at the Sun Shipbuilding Yards, Chester, Pa.

The commission said Donald McKay was largely responsible for the pre-eminence of the American merchant marine in the middle of the last century. The commission said Donald would be accompanied to the launching by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKay, of Bloomfield, N. Y., and his grandfather, Richard C. McKay.

Reorganization Data Is Asked By President

Bureaus Requested To Supply Figures By April 25

President Roosevelt called on Federal department heads yesterday to submit by April 25 plans for reorganizing Government bureaus.

The action was his first step toward exercising the reorganization powers recently granted him by Congress after two years of bitter controversy.

Less than two weeks was allowed for officials to turn in their plans, it was learned, because Mr. Roosevelt hopes some regrouping of bureaus may be accomplished before Congress adjourns.

The law requires that all executive reorganization orders be subjected to congressional consideration for 60 days before they become effective. Disapproval of both branches is required to invalidate an order.

Mr. Roosevelt's instructions to department heads were contained in a letter sent by Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, at the President's direction.

Each official was asked to make suggestions of three types—first, how the various divisions of his department might be more efficiently and economically organized; second, what agencies should be transferred from other departments to his own; third, what agencies should be transferred from his department to others.

Reshuffling bureaus within a department is expected to cause little trouble and probably will form the bulk of proposals at this session. Treasury officials already have drawn up a plan for combining their six law enforcement branches into one.

But interdepartmental shuffling, Administration officials predict, will let the President in for a long headache, because no agency head likes to give up any of his duties. For example, the Social Security Board is expected to request merger of the Labor Department's re-employment service with the board's unemployment compensation branch, but Secretary Perkins is understood to want the combined service placed in the Labor Department.

House to Speed Bill for Rail Reorganiation

not affected by the plan of adjustment" provided in the bill.

Chairman Lea said that while only a relatively small portion of the rail industry will be benefitted by the Chandler bill, it was a step in the right direction to allow railroads to reduce outstanding securities and interest charges.

Speaking of various proposals to rehabilitate the entire rail industry, Lea said the interstate commerce committee would meet next Wednesday to begin framing a bill. "While there may be some differences in our bill from the proposals before Senator Wheeler (chairman of the Senate interstate commerce committee) they will not be so great that we can't adjust them and thereby secure helpful legislation for the railroad industry," he said.

Va. Firm Challenges NLRB Jurisdiction

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board had under advisement yesterday the question of its jurisdiction over the Virginia Electric and Power Company, Richmond.

Power company attorneys contended at a hearing before the board that it had no authority to investigate labor union complaints against the Vepco because the companies' activities were local and not interstate.

Bill Would Allow U. S. to Purchase Theater and Club

Under a bill now under consideration by the House Appropriations Committee the Federal Government would purchase the Belasco Theater and the Cosmos Club and use the sites for an annex to the Treasury Building.

Introduced by Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, the bill carries an appropriation of $2,100,000, part of which would go toward remodeling of the present Treasury annex on Pennsylvania avenue and Madison place.

Smith said yesterday he had introduced the measure "by request" and its passage would make possible carrying out of provisions made in the Keyes-Elliot Act of 1930. The first annex was authorized in 1917. Authorization for the extension nine years ago came "when money was scarce" and, therefore, has not been followed up by an appropriation, he said.

Albanian Captain Held in 2 Slayings

Athens, April 14 (AP).—Police held an Albanian army captain, Korre Nazim, under observation in a hospital tonight after he killed a Greek consul and a police officer and then attempted suicide.

Police said Nazim shot the two men while in a nervous fit. He was arranging with the consul for a trip abroad. Nazim fled to Saloniki following the Italian invasion of Albania.

Dr. Brooks to Discuss 'That Which Is Basic'

At the services of Lincoln Congregational Temple tomorrow morning, Dr. R. W. Brooks will speak from the theme, "That Which Is Basic and Permanent."

The Mus-Art Club will present the "Culture Hour" program at 4:30 p. m. The Dunbar High School chorus will sing.

Club to Hike Tomorrow

The Capitol Hiking Club will take a 5-mile hike down the rocky gorge of the Patuxent River, from Burtonsville to Laurel, tomorrow. The trip will include a visit to the abandoned Irvington beryl-mica mine. Buses leave 1416 F street northwest at 10 a. m.

Bomb Shakes Liverpool

Liverpool, England, Saturday, April 15 (U.P.).—A bomb explosion shattered a telephone booth and smashed windows in a quarter-mile radius early today. One woman required hospital treatment for shock.

Conductors Slight American Music, Says Siegmeister

Too little music by modern American composers finds its way before concert audiences, Elie Siegmester, music lecturer at the New School for Social Research, told a Book Shop meeting last night. A composer in his own right, Siegmeister traced the development of modern compositions from native sources—jazz and folk music.

While classical music is inclined to be "something distant," modern compositions, he said, "reflect the struggle around us" and deal with matters in each listener's experience. He declared that it would be widely accepted and appreciated if it received its proper recognition by symphony orchestras.

Mates' Odd Fare Student's Despair

San Diego, Calif., April 14 (U.P.).—Joseph A. Pranis, San Diego State College student, stopped eating three days ago in hope that collegiate goldfish eaters thereby would come to realize "their intellectual horizon is draped in a decadent culture." But today he ended his hunger strike in disgust and despair.

The 20-year-old Pranis said he took up eating again not because he was hungry, but because he had failed to impress those who publicly eat goldfish, worms, mice or phonograph records.

THINK of getting "The Collected Poems of Robert Frost" for $1.69. Or Phyllis Bottome's tense and daring novel about dictatorship, "The Mortal Storm," for only $1.29. The big "Damon Runyon Omnibus" once $6, now only 98c. "Golden Fleece," the tragic, true story of the Hapsburgs, once $3.50, is now only $1.49.

Here is a carefully selected list of best sellers in handsome reprint editions. These are not "Publisher's Overstock" or "Remainders" but brand new printings from the original, expensive plates. They are all large library size, bound in specially selected cloth or sturdy buckram, stamped in gilt. Some of the editions are strictly limited and can be supplied only while our present stock lasts.

The remarkable savings offered here are made possible, first, by the success of these books at their original prices; second, by large production printings using the original plates; third, by special arrangement with the original publishers and the authors on copyright and reduced royalties.*

Army, Navy Expansion to Double Force

Program Will Set Peacetime Record in Construction Work

New battleships for the fleet and planes and tanks for the Army will nearly double the civil force of the Army and Navy above 1933 lows and bring an extensive expansion in their plant and office space, an official survey reveals.

Studies prepared by the War and Navy Departments show that since President Roosevelt began constructing warships six years ago and started slowly building up the land forces the number of civilian employes of both services has risen more than 25 per cent. The next two years, moreover, will see the departmental and field employes reach new peace-time highs.

75,000 on Navy Roll

The Navy says that from a low of 56,000 employes in November, 1934—slightly higher than 1933—its pay roll has risen to 75,000. All Navy yards now are working two to three shifts a day, but under a plant expansion program recently voted by Congress, it is expected that there will be 100,000 on the rolls by the end of 1941, when the peak of the shipbuilding program will be reached.

From a low of 47,877 in 1932, the Army civil force is up to a high of 67,655 at present. These figures include Army engineer employes engaged in rivers and harbors and flood-control work, and are not, therefore, a true indication of the expansion resulting from the armament program. Studies are now under way as to what may be expected in pay-roll enlargement from the Army expansion program recently authorized by Congress.

Private Industry Favored

Army arsenals generally are operating on but one shift, though some shops are working 16 to 24 hours a day. While, therefore capable of great expansion, the plants may not be stopped up to full capacity, as the Department wants to "educate" private industry in munitions production. About 75 per cent of the new armament program will be farmed out to industry, it is said, with the remainder and much of the assembling work left to the Government factories.

The number of employes in the War and Navy departments has not increased proportionately to the total enlargement. Expansion has come mainly in the drafting rooms and shops, rather than administrative and clerical capacities.

Navy Yard Force Doubled

Both departments employ sizable forces of draftsmen here, but they only prepare contract plans and specifications for bidders.

In 1934, the civil force at the Navy Department was down to 2,000 while today it is about 2,450. The War Department classified service has risen from 3,933 to 4,489 since 1932.

The Washington Navy Yard has more than doubled its force since 1934, expanding from 3,600 to 7,800.

The departmental personnel expansion has been accomplished for the most part by crowding in newcomers in available office space. The War Department now occupies 1,305,158 square feet as against 1,235,838 in 1932, while the Navy has only recently added about 100,000 square feet of office space.

While the War Department is scattered all over town in rented and temporary buildings, the Navy obtained additional space by building "pent-houses," costing about $100,000 each, over the second and third wings at the Department.

Plans are on foot for an additional four or five of these "pent-houses," and, if carried through, will give the Department the area it needs pending a new structure.

Huff Indorses Church Drive for 'Prison Sunday'

"In my opinion, the spiritual forces of the District could, if they would, create a community of people in which crime would find no root." Thus did Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions, indorse the observance of "Prison Sunday" April 23 among local churches.

Huff's indorsement was addressed to Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, who has been cooperating with other religious and social leaders in a drive to get a Protestant chaplain for District penal institutions, to be employed by the churches.

Dr. Darby has asked local clergymen to present the prison situation to their congregations on April 23.

Paris Sends More Troops To Pyrenees

Spain, Germany Reported Reinforcing Borders Along France

Paris, April 14.—France today sent additional troops to the Western Pyrenees to counter heavy reinforcement of Spanish garrisons just across the frontier.

Reports reached the French border of the arrival at Vera, a Basque village barely 3 miles from the French frontier, of 5,000 Spanish infantry.

According to border reports there is similar activity at La Linea, near Gibraltar, where Galacian reinforcements are so numerous that barracks have overflowed and soldiers, tanks and artillery are parked in the bullring.

British engineers at Gibraltar last night barricaded the main road leading from La Linea to the fort guarding the entrance to the Mediterranean. French military and air attaches from Burgos went to Gibraltar by automobile where they conferred with British commanders.

French border correspondents reported German troop movements in the Palatinate and Rhineland, in the vicinity of Trier and Strasbourg. French advices from abroad claimed other German troop movements were taking place in the east, opposite Poland, and along the Jugoslav frontier in southwestern Germany.

The movements near the French frontier were believed to be designed to strengthen the Siegfried line, which still is considered weaker that the French Maginot line, which it faces. The French appeared to be more concerned with the reported concentrations near Poland and Jugoslavia than with action along the Rhine.

The newspaper Oeuvre published what purported to be a detailed disposition of German troops and claimed that by tonight Chancellor Adolf Hitler would have completed these "preparations" at various points.

Thirty-eight thousand troops in east Prussia, 72,000 on the Polish northeastern border, 220,000 on the Polish southeastern border, 350,000 on the Dutch frontier and 430,000 on the Western frontier opposite the Maginot line. The newspaper added that Germany has 100,000 Reichswehr troops in Italy and 38,000 in Italian Libya.

According to this estimate Germany has 1,248,000 soldiers in strategic positions.

Hungarians Offer Pact To Rumania

Conciliatory Gesture Raises Hopes for Security in Balkans

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, April 14.—A conciliatory Hungarian gesture toward Rumania on top of British and French guarantees of the independence of Rumania and Greece brought a feeling of greater security today to the Balkans.

From Budapest to the Black Sea foreign offices reflected more optimism than has been apparent for many days.

There were no signs, however, that military precautions were being relaxed. Hungarian soldiers remained near the Rumanian border.

Hungary Isn't Offended

In political circles it was said there were encouraging circumstances in that:

Hungary did not feel offended by the Anglo-French guarantees to Rumania.

Foreign Minister Count Csaky chose the very day the Anglo-French pledges were given to propose a Rumania-Hungarian pact to settle irritating questions of Hungarian minorities in Rumania.

There were no immediate Rumanian reactions to the count's conciliatory statement.

Bucharest newspapers did not publish his assertion, made before Parliament yesterday, that Hungary respect Rumania's borders but wished prompt negotiation of a pact between the two states, extending the rights of Hungarian minorities in Rumania.

Problem in Transylvania

(Rumania has an estimated 1,200,000 Hungarians. The main body lives in eastern Transylvania, not contiguous w ith the Hungarian frontier. Transylvania was won by Rumania after the World War.)

The Hungarian newspaper Esti Ujsag regarding the Anglo-French guarantees to Rumania calmly, but insisted "the promises of distant lands are of less value to Rumania than good relations with an immediate neighbor."

Repeal Urged As Solution of Neutrality Row

None of 3 Proposals Before Committee Has a Majority

Amid sharp division over methods of amending the neutrality act, the Senate Foreign Relations committee yesterday heard repeal of the law suggested as an alternative.

Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk, director of the National Peace conference, who said he represented 40 peace organizations, reported wide differences of opinion within his own group.

Van Kirk testified that 12 organizations and representatives of six additional groups favored the Thomas amendment, which empowers the President, with approval of Congress, to name "aggressor" nations and discriminate against treaty violators.

He said only four organizations and representatives of three additional groups favored strengthening of the present law. Making clear he was voicing his own opinions and not necessarily those of the peace groups, he said if agreement cannot be reached on the Thomas bill, repeal may be the solution.

"All of these organzations, regardless of these differences, are determined that the United States shall be drawn into a military conflict overseas," he told the Senate committee.

Preceding Van Kirk, J. G. Luhrsen, executive secretary of the Railway Labor Executives Association, testified in behalf of the proposed Constitutional amendment requiring a war referendum to the people before Congress could declare war, except when the Western Hemisphere was attacked.

Two repeal measures are now before the committee, one sponsored by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, and the other by the late Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois. The first witness before the committee last week, former Secretary of State Stimson, had concluded that repeal "might be the safest way out."

The conflict within the committee, which threatened to end in action before present "cash and carry" provisions expire next month, appeared mainly between three other proposals, none of which now has a committee majority.

They were:

The Pittman bill, which on recognition by the President or Congress of a state of war would place all trade with belligerent nations on a "cash and carry" basis.

The Thomas bill, which authorizes the President with Congressional approval to distinguish between "aggressor" and "victim."

on a "misunderstanding," as one Nazi put it.

"The United States is making the very same mistake as is England—meddling in Germany's affairs which do not concern them," one German official commented. "What right, for example, does the United States have to try to prevent us from making an economic treaty with Rumania that benefits either side?"

"Master Wire Puller"

In other Nazi circles it was asserted that Roosevelt "clearly revealed himself as the master wire puller behind the anti-German encirclement policy."

A dispatch of the official news agency on American relief was headed "God's own country now Satan's country."

"What we want is a Monroe Doctrine in southeastern Europe and it is not for America to meddle in it," one Wilhelmstrasse source said. "We want no more and no less than the United States claims under her Monroe Doctrine."

The view was expressed in these quarters that Rumania and Greece accepted Greece's offer of protection because they feared to offend Britain by rejecting it.

There was silence on the Reich's relations with Poland, although the press carried short reports that Polish Foreign Minister Beck was planning a trip to Paris.

Official circles still professed a belief that Poland would never sign an alliance with Britain. (Poland and Britain concluded an interim defensive alliance, but technical discussions are scheduled before it is made formal and permanent.)

Roosevelt Hint at Third Term Seen in Mt. Vernon Speech

leave Mount Vernon with Denys Wortman, artist and cartoonist, selected by the Sons of the American Revolution to portray Washington, on a replica of the journey.

The coach's first stop will be at Wise's Tavern, now the Anne Lee Memorial Home, at Alexandria, where Mayor Ruffner will receive the travelers. The party will arrive at the District Building at 4:30 p. m., and, after a reception by the Commissioners, it will proceed to the Sons of the American Revolution headquarters at 1227 Sixteenth street northwest, where the party will spend the night.

A visit to the White House and Dumbarton House is scheduled for Monday.

On Capitol Hill last night there was a conflict of opinion over whether Mr. Roosevelt's words indicated he, too, might choose to continue in public life after his term ends if there should be a crisis.

"The President's words certainly would indicate the third-term possibility," said Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, said he drew no such inference from the President's words.

Following is text of the President's speech:

We have come to the home of George Washington today in memory of another day, exactly one hundred and fifty years ago, when the owner of Mount Vernon received a message from the First Congress of the United States.

Here in his beloved Mount Vernon he listened to the formal message from the Congress announcing his election as the first President of the United States of America.

Charles Thomson, his guest, had ridden hither from New York to bring it—Charles Thomson, native of County Derry, in Ireland, a Pennsylvania Irishman, with a passionate zeal for liberty, who, through 15 eventful years, had served as the secretary of the Continental Congress.

We who are here today can readily visualize that scene from this porch—the sprouting lawn, the budding trees and the dogwoods, and the majestic Potomac running by at the foot of the hill. We can visualize the thoughts, too, which flowed through Gen. Washington's mind. Saying farewell to his army in 1783, the independence of the colonies assured, he, already the father of his country, had returned to his beloved Mount Vernon with the hope and expectation that his task was done and that he would live a happy and useful life on his broad acres during the remainder of his days.

But trying times still lay ahead for the struggling Nation, and those years after 1783 proved the most critical peace years in all our history.

Called from his home, he had presided with skill and patience over the constitutional convention in 1787. And anxiety and doubt had attended him for many months thereafter, while he waited for belated news that the Constitution itself had been ratified by the States.

I take it that when the permanent framework of the Union had been assured in the summer of 1788, the elections ordered and the first Congress summoned, Gen. Washington must have known that the task of the Presidency would, without question, fall on him.

It meant that once more he would leave Mount Vernon behind him, with no certainty of his return, and that on his shoulders, in the far-off north, would lie the burden of initiating the civil leadership of a new, untried republic.

He knew that his would be the task of ending uncertainty, jealousy between the several States and creating, with the help of the Congress, a functioning National Government fit to take its place among the organized nations of the world.

Two days later he and his family were to set forth on that long and difficult journey by highway and ferry and barge, which was to culminate in his inauguration as President on the balcony of Federal Hall, in New York, on April 30, 1789.

Doubtless on this very porch he sat with Charles Thomson, hearing at first hand of the long efforts of the first Senate and the first House of Representatives to obtain a quorum, learning of the unanimity by which the votes of the electors were cast for him, listening to the precedents that were being set in the conduct of the first Legislature under the Constitution, and thinking doubtless that his own every move from that day on for many years to come would be chronicled for future generations and thereby set the tempo and the customs of the Presidency of the United States.

But I am to be forgiven if I, the thirty-first President, dwell for a moment on the feelings within the breast of him who was about to be the first President.

Washington was essentially a man close to Mother Earth. His early training on a plantation, his profession of surveyor, his studies in agriculture and the development of farm lands were never replaced by his outstanding military service under Braddock or as commander in chief for the eight years of the revolution.

We know that when Mount Vernon came to him by inheritance, here his heart was planted for all time. Here he could talk with his neighbors about the improvement of navigation on the river, about grist mills on the creeks, about the improving of highways, about the dream of a canal to the Western country, about sawmills and rotation of crops, about the top soil, which even then had begun to run off to the sea. About the planting of trees, new varieties of food and fodder crops, new breeds of horses and cattle and sheep.

Here, too, he had his books and was in touch with the authors and artists of the New and Old Worlds.

At Junction Point

Here at the junction point of the north and of the south, at the foot of one of the main arteries that led to the exciting new lands beyond the mountans, the travelers and the news stopped at his door.

Rightly he must have felt that his labors in the service of his State and of his Nation had rounded out his contribution to the public weal. Rightly he felt that he had earned the privilege of returning for all time to the private life which had been his dream.

That Washington would have refused public service if the call had been a normal one has always been my belief. But the summons to the Presidency had come to him in a time of real crisis and deep emergency. The dangers that beset the young Nation were as real as though the very independence Washington had won for it had been threatened once more by foreign foes. Clear it must have been that the permanence of the Republic was at stake and that if the new government, under the Constitution, should fail in its early days, the several States falling out among themselves would become so many small and weak nations subject to attack and conquest from overseas.

So it came about that once more he put from him the life he loved so well and took upon himself the Presidency.

That cannot have been a happy day for General and Mrs. George Washington on the fourteenth of April, 1789—a day of torn emotions, a day of many regrets.

The decision had been made. We, their successors, are thankful for that decision and proud of it. And I think that it would have made General and Mrs. Washington happy if they had known that one hundred and fifty years later, tens of millions of Americans would appreciate and understand how they felt that day in their Mount Vernon home.

Richard Franasovici, in Warsaw, and by the Rumanian foreign minister, Grigore Gafencu, and the Polish ambassador, Count Roger Raczynski, in Bucharest.

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy called on Prime Minister Chamberlain, congratulating him on his statement in the House of Commons yesterday in which he extended guarantees of independence to Greece and Rumania.

President Roosevelt's Pan American Day speech was welcomed, it was broadcast over the country and also rebroadcast in German by a semi-official British station.

Negotiating With Turks

The nation's preparednes campaign was expanded, the admiralty deciding to form a women's naval service to take over many naval jobs on shore, so that trained man may be released for new warships and the ministry of agriculture planning to recruit a women's land "army" to replace, or augment, male farm workers.

Foreign office officials stressed that negotiations were being pushed to conclude an Anglo-French guarantee to Turkey. It was believed generally that such a pledge would be announced next week.

Because of Polish and Rumanian objections to their territory being defended by a Russian land force, the French were reported to have suggested that the Russian air fleet alone be used against Germany if Germany were to attack either Poland or Rumania. Rumania and Poland, under this scheme, would be asked to permit the Russians to use their airports.

Military experts were said to believe that Rumanian or Polish armies, backed by Russian planes, would be able to prolong a war on the eastern front while Britain and France were co-ordinating their attack on the west.

Realize Limitations

Rumania and Poland were represented as objecting to Russian support because part of the territory of each once belonged to Russia and they feared that if a Russian army again occupied the land, even as an ally, she never would give it up.

Both Polish and Rumanian officials realized that neither Britain nor France was in a position to lend immediate support to their nations if Germany were to attack them.

"If war occurred tomorrow," David Lloyd George, wartime prime minister, warned Chamberlain, "you could not send a single battalion to Poland."

Many experts agreed with Lloyd George and for that reason there were hopes the support of at least the Russian air fleet could be gained.

Offense Is Feared

Though one official spoke of the possibility of an early agreement with Russia, there were fears in other quarters that Russia would resent the suggestion her air fleet was wanted, but not her army.

The prime minister and Mrs. Chamberlain left No. 10 Downing street in the morning for Chequers after Ambassador Kennedy called. They will go to Windsor Castle tomorrow to spend a day and a night with King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Lord Halifax, getting his first vacation in two weeks, went to Yorkshire for the week-end.

Rome, April 14.—Field Marshal Goering of Germany arrived here tonight resplendent in a white summer uniform for important conferences with Premier Mussolini, King Victor Emmanuel and Foreign Minister Ciano.

He was met at the station by Ciano and a guard of honor of Italian aviators. Holding his marshal's baton in his left hand Goering exchanged Fascist salutes and a handshake with Mussolini's son-in-law while thousands of Italians gathered to see the dignitaries shouted, "Heil Hitler, Viva Il Duce," and waved paper flags. Mrs. Goering was with her husband.

Two hours after Goering arrived, on the stroke of 10 p. m., Rome was plunged into darkness, sirens shrieked, anti-aircraft and machine guns crackled and blaring loudspeakers warned citizens "enemy bombers are advancing on Rome."

Mussolini himself had issued from Venice Palace orders for the "surprise attack."

People rushed to shelter, policemen patrolled the streets and blue-lighted ambulances crosed the city picking up "wounded" and rushing them to hospitals.

The Pope, it was understood, was reading in his private library when sirens sounded the "attack." His secretary immediately put out the lights and the Vatican central powerhouse cut off power by agreement with Italian authorities to observe air raid drills.

The King will receive Goering at Quirinal Palace at noon tomorrow, the Queen simultaneously receiving Mrs. Goering. Mussolini and Goering will meet in the afternoon at Venice Palace. Ciano probably will attend this meeting, otherwise Goering will visit him later at Chigi Palace.

The Goerings were scheduled to depart Monday morning, probably going direct to Berlin.

Atom-Smasher Checks Cancer, Says Dr. Hektoen

The cyclotron, an atom-smashing machine developed within the last few years, is producing heartening results in experimental use against cancer, a Federal public health official announced yesterday.

"Tests have not gone far enough to establish permanent cures," said Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, executive director of the National Advisory Health Council, "but the cancerous growths of these patients are receding and this bit of encouraging evidence of the value of the radioactive particles produced by the cyclotron is leading to further studies and experimentation."

The experiments are going forward at the University of California, where the cyclotron was invented.

U. S. to Defend Americas, Says President

Roosevelt

Most members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, including Chairman Pittman and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, withheld immediate comment.

Commemorating the forty-ninth anniversary of the establishment of the Pan American Union, President Roosevelt spoke on "Pan-American day," in the Hall of the Americas in the Pan-American building, to members of the governing board of the 20 Latin American Republics. He called it the oldest and most successful association of sovereign governments in the world.

He said Americans are celebrating a peace that "has no quality of weakness in it."

"We are prepared to maintain it, and to defend it to the fullest extent of our strength, matching force to force if any attempt is made to subvert our institutions or to impair the independence of any one of our group," he asserted.

He declared it the spirit and intent of the Lima declaration of last December that America is also prepared to give economic aid should this hemisphere be attacked with economic weapons.

Unending Militarism

"The issue is really whether our civilization is to be dragged into the tragic vortex of unending militarism punctuated by periodic wars, or whether we shall be able to maintain the ideal of peace, individuality and civilization as the fabric of our lives."

Then he declared Pan-Americans have the right to say there shall not be an organization of world affairs "which permits us no choice but to turn our countries into barracks, unless we are to be vassals of some conquering empire."

He urged that this "living message" be sent from the New World to the Old—that the America's, "by example," point the path of peace and have a voice "in determining the order of world affairs."

The President said the oceans will be narrowed by developments of the next generation, and that the economic functioning of the world will become more unified. Thus, he argued, customs and actions of the two hemispheres are necessarily involved, and economic interruptions anywhere will "disrupt economic right everywhere."

Replies to Nazis

While the past generation was concerned with laying foundations of Western hemisphere co-operation, he contended the next generation "will be concerned with the methods by which the New World can live together with the Old."

Referring to Nazi protests of "encirclement" directed at the Anglo-French defense guarantees, the President declared "there is no such thing as encircling, or threatening, or imprisoning any peaceful nation by other peaceful nations."

Then he recalled his pledge last summer to Canada that the United States would join in defending her were she ever attacked from overseas. He recalled the Pan-American declaration at Lima that the Americas would co-ordinate their common efforts to defend the integrity of their institutions from attack. And he referred to the Buenos Aires agreement in 1936 to consult together to avert any war or threat of war on this continent.

"Yet in no case," he said, "did any American nation regard any of these understandings as making any one of them a 'prisoner,' or as 'encircling' any American country, or as a threat of any sort or kind."

Commenting that Pan-American nations have begun to realize what civilized intercourse between nations means, he asked if it is "too much to hope that a similar intellectual and spiritual process may succeed elsewhere?"

"Typically American"

"Do we really have to assume that nations can find no better method of realizing their destinies than those which were used by the Huns and Vandals 1,500 years ago?" he asked.

He referred to the Pan-American Union as a "typically American institution," which holds open conferences not as a result of wars, and arrives at agreements "as guarantees not of war, but of peace." And he declared that "no nation on this hemisphere has any will to aggression, or any desire to establish dominance or mastery."

Dreams of conquest among American nations he called "as ridiculous as they are criminal," adding that mutual Pan American understandings "make warfare between us as outworn and useless as the weapons of the stone age."

Repeatedly he referred to the Union as "the American family of nations."

"It can be a light opening on dark waters," he concluded. "It shows the path of peace."

Closely paralleling the President's remarks, Hull, as chairman of the governing board of the union, declared the Americas face a disturbed world with "historic instruments."

"One," he said, "the declaration of Lima, sets forth the unchangeable purpose of the New World and maintain the security of the hemisphere and the institutions of its free peoples.

"The other, the Declaration of American principles, offers to all nations an invitation to join in co-operative effort, whereby the advantages of world order under principles of justice and free opportunity may be made available to all, leaving no reason for war."

Rather than a "closed alliance," Hull said these two instruments are in principle "an offer of peaceful co-operation to each and all.

Hull told the delegates that Pan-Americanism does not rest on "preponderance of arms or balance of power." But this "method of life" in the Western hemisphere, he said, now faces the challenge of "whether its conception of peaceful adjustment can be maintained in the face of a world outside, some parts of which boldly insist that there can be no valid relations save those based on force."

And he raised the question of whether our relations with certain parts of the world can be maintained upon the ethical and equitable conceptions which we have adopted for ourselves."

He said recent inter-American relations "indicate the answer."

"None can say that we offer to the world an example of international adjustment maintained by reason because we have not at our command the more brutal weapons; nor can any harbor the illusion that our insistence upon international justice is an appeal which springs from weakness," Hull said.

Catholics Plan to Teach Democracy

Educators Propose Instruction From Youth to Maturity

The National Catholic Educational Association yesterday urged the cooperation of all Catholic educators in a program of intensified instruction in "the true nature of Christian democracy" for their people from childhood to maturity.

The resolution was adopted at the concluding session in the thirty-sixth annual meeting at the Catholic University of America, which was attended by about 3,000 educators. It was in accord with an apostolic letter from the late Pope Pius XI to the bishops of the United States on the opening of the golden jubilee of the university, October 12 last year.

The resolution recalled that in their pastoral letter of November 24, the bishops stated, "To carry out the injunction of the Holy Father, it is necessary that our people, from childhood to mature age, be ever better instructed in the true nature of Christian democracy . . . They must be held to the conviction that love of country is a virtue and that disloyalty is a sin."

Texts Being Prepared

Referring to the preparation of a series of texts for all educational levels, undertaken by the university, the association quoted the bishops: "On the foundation of religious training, which is the distinctive characteristic of our schools, these texts will build an enlightened, conscientious citizenship."

Other resolutions adopted by the association were of loyalty to the Pope, of appreciation of Catholic University and Georgetown University, and on two aspects of American educational life. One of these resolutions cited the secularization of American schools, and another denounced the "flood of indecent pictorial and printed matter being sold and circulated among American youth."

Calling for a re-appraisal of American education, the association stated that it "should not stop short of a very searching analysis of the effects of the secularization of our schools that began upwards of a hundred years ago and which constituted a break with the educational traditions of those who founded the nation.

Religious Influence Waning

"The result has been," the resolution continued, "that the influence of religion in American life has been on the wane, and since religion is the only real guarantee of freedom, we have reason to fear the encroachment of movements, political, social and industrial, that degrade human dignity and have no reverence whatever for the sacredness of human personality. . . . Here is an issue that the American people must face lest the schools by support continue to decline as means of individual and social betterment."

Officers were re-elected. The Most Rev. John B. Peterson, Bishop of Manchester, N. H., is president general. Vice presidents general are the Rev. John B. Furey, Mundelein, Ill.; the Rev. William F. Cunningham, Notre Dame, Ind.; the Rt. Rev. Joseph V. S. McClancy, Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Rev. Paul E. Campbell, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Brother Eugene A. Paulin, Kirkwood, Mo. The treasurer general is the Rev. Richard J. Quinlan, Boston.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress presents Thursday evening in Coolidge Auditorium the first of two programs of vocal chamber music directed by Nadia Boulanger. Singers: Noemie Perugia, Juliana Claxton, Nathalie Kedroff, Hugues Cuenod and Doda Conrad, assisted by William Kroll, Nicolai Berezowski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb (the Coolidge Quartet) and Frank Enby, double bass. Program of songs ranging from the fourteenth century to the present day.

Nadia Boulanger, whose curiosity about music of all times and places is insatiable, was responsible for the unusual concert which delighted as many auditors as could find places last evening in Coolidge Auditorium. Directing at the piano a small group of five singers and five instrumentalists, she disclosed some of her treasure trove, part of it from manuscripts of anonymous composers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, part of it from unfamiliar compositions by John Dowland, Thomas Campion, Luca Marenzio, Palestrina, Purcell, Mozart and Brahms, and part of it from the pens of young contemporary composers who have tried their hands at the revival of olden procedures.

To discuss in detail all the beauties of more than 20 songs is obviously beyond the power of a reviewer hastening to catch the final edition. One can mention only such things as the poignant loveliness of Dowland's "Shall I sue, shall I seek for grace," the harmonic charm of the anonymous conzones, "Dimmi dolce Maria" and "In su quil' alto monte;" the despairing tenderness of Marenzio's "Ahi dispietate morte," and the insidious humor of songs by Adriano Banchieri and Horatio Vecchi, who flourished three centuries ago.

One was grateful for further acquaintance with the music of Henry Purcell, the English genius who died when Bach was a lad of ten. The more one hears of his compositions, the more impressive is the range of his interests and the liveliness of his imagination. The fragments from "King Arthur" testify to his greatness in the field of theatrical music.

The youthful composers represented on the program were Barbara Trask with "It Was a Lordling's Daughter," Gail Kubik with "Children's Song," Alexis Haiev with "Old Nurse's Charm," Livingston Gearhart with "Rorate Coeli—O Emmanuel," Leo Preger with "Il viendra vers toi" and Harrington Shortall with "The Night Is Well-nigh Spent."

Tennesseeans To Perform in Folk Festival

Fred Colby to Bring 20 Square Dancers To Demonstrate Art

"Right hand your pardner. Away we'll go.
Ramble in the canebrake. Shoot the tuffalo."

Does that sound like gibberish? A Tennessean would shoot you on sight if you said so.

In the first place, that verse and dozens of others are as intelligible to Tennessee square dancers as words like "jam" and "corny" are to a jitterburg. In the second place, according to Fred W. Colby of Nashville, the verse makes perfectly good sense in the light of Tennessee history, which records that the hunters who settled the State had first to clear the canebrakes of buffalo.

Bringing 20 Dancers

Colby will bring a group of about 20 dancers to the National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall, April 27 to 29, to show Washington the swift and intricate steps of mountain dances, singing games and running sets.

As State executive officer of the AAA, Colby has traveled widely throughout Tennessee and has had plenty of opportunity to learn more about his hobby. Sometimes he has had difficulty getting any business done on these trips, he confesses, because the very sight of him is sufficient to set a square dance in motion, and he is no one to sit by when there's dancing going on.

Having taken part in dances and games since his boyhood, and collected many more figures and calls in recent years, Colby probably knows more about them than anyone in the country. The subject is no academic one to him, however. He does all he can to encourage the preservation of such traditional entertainment and is chiefly responsible for the high caliber of the Tennessee delegation to be sent to the festival.

Sarah Gertrude Knott and M. J. Pickering of the National Folk Festival Association first saw Colby perform at a regional festival held at Crossville, Tenn., in 1935. They promptly invited him to participate in the second annual National Folk Festival at Chattanooga that year. He and his dancers have appeared at every national festival since that time.

Among the numbers they will present this year are "Old Betsy Liner," "Do Se Do," "Cut the Pigeon Wing," "Chase the Rabbit" and "Ladies Bow, Gents Know How." In addition to singing games and square dances, they will sing traditional folk songs and ballads.

Tickets for the National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall April 27-29 are available at The Washington Post Building, 1337 E street northwest, daily and Sunday from 8 a. m. until midnight. Prices for the three matinees range from 50 cents to $1; for the evening shows, from 50 cents to $2. A different program will be presented at each performance.

Mayor Mellor Renamed

Piedmont, W. Va., April 14.—Mayor Donald Mellor was renominated at the city primary here, receiving 104 votes, to 73 for George M. Boyles, Spanish-American War veteran. Boyles carried his councilmanic ticket with Bonner C. Hardegen, Harold Fredlock and William T. Davis. Hardegan and Davis are incumbents.

A Problem In Procedure

"The main complaint," says Representative Ramspeck, referring to the national labor relations act, "is with the nature of the board and not with the act."

Contrary to this view, it can be argued most convincingly that much, if not most, of the hostility aroused by the NLRB is due to the law itself rather than the shortcomings of those responsible for its administration.

No group of officials attempting to enforce such a new and controversial measure could have hoped to escape a withering barrage of critical fire from employer interests, even under the most favorable conditions. And conditions have been the reverse of propitious. For the split in labor's ranks has created exceptionally difficult problems for the board, making it a target for attack by the A. F. of L. and to some extent, by the C. I. O.

The hearings before the Senate Labor Committee which have started most auspiciously should provide all the information and expert advice needed to enable Congress to amend the act intelligently. The NLRB itself has just submitted a lengthy report refuting charges that the act is one-sided and unfair, and setting forth its views in regard to various proposed amendments. Opportunity will, of course, be afforded the committee to interrogate board members, examine records, and listen to critics and defenders of the law. Such hearings are, as Representative Barden says, "tantamount to an investigation." And they are less likely to lead to unprofitable discussion of past mistakes and past accomplishments having little direct bearing upon present conditions and future problems.

There does not appear to be any good reason, however, why the House should institute hearings on its own account, which would entail a repetition of testimony given to the Senate Labor Committee. But it is important to postpone legislative action until both House and Senate have had time to study the information obtained through hearings. Only confusion will result if efforts are made to amend the labor relations act prematurely.

It has been proposed, for instance, to replace the NLRB by an entirely new body, the members of which would represent different sections of the country and different interested groups: employers, employes, and the public. To suggest such a metamorphosis of the NLRB is to ignore the fact that it is a quasi-judicial agency, not a mediatory body. It was not established to represent special interests, but to enforce a law passed in the interest of the general public. It would be a very topsy-turvy sort of legislative procedure to metamorphose the administrative agency that enforces the national labor relations act without first deciding what changes ought to be made in the scope and character of the duties with which it is charged.

Off Gibraltar

In the present highly disturbed state of Europe, no military action taken by any major power can safely be described as "routine." That certainly applies to the maneuvers which the German navy plans to hold this spring off the coast of Spain.

The decision to hold these maneuvers is capable of two-fold interpretation. Reports from Berlin suggest that in removing a large part of the German fleet at this time from home waters, the Reich is giving impressive notice that it does not regard the present European situation as critical.

This may well be true. But coming at a time when the Mediterranean occupies the center of the international stage, and at a moment when the British are openly making preparations to fend off a possible attack on Gibraltar, the contemplated German naval maneuvers are capable of a far different and much less optimistic interpretation.

The German fleet is decidedly inferior to the British fleet in almost every category of naval strength. This means that in the event of war, all Nazi warships except submarines would be cooped up in the Baltic and reduced to ineffectiveness.

But it is well to remember the persistent reports that, during the Spanish civil war, ports on that country's Biscay coast have been prepared as German seaplane and submarine bases. The same is also rumored, to be true of the Canary Islands.

If permitted by Gen. Franco to use Spanish harbors and Spanish islands as bases of operation, the axis would be in a position to harass British and French shipping and, by combining German and Italian naval power, at least put up a fight for the control of the Mediterranean. The loss by Great Britain of Gibraltar and the mining of the strait that serves as the western inlet to the Mediterranean might, for a time at least, imperil British control of that great artery.

The prospective German naval maneuvers off Spain may, therefore, be the German counterpart of the Italian seizure of Albania. They may not unreasonably be regarded as another implicit challenge to Great Britain in the vital area of her all-important communication with her empire.

'We Too Have A Stake'

There was a most interesting continuity of thought in the two short speeches, prepared for two very different occasions, which the President delivered yesterday.

Because of its political character, and its obvious international importance, the morning address, in honor of Pan-American Day, has secured much greater publicity. But the talk at Mount Vernon in the afternoon is not to be regarded as merely a very beautiful tribute to George Washington. It was also, for all its brief compass, a thoughtful consideration of a vital chapter in American history. The connection between that chapter and the one now opening, for the United States is not obscure.

The dangers confronting the young Republic, Mr. Roosevelt surmised, provided the impetus which made Washington willing to leave his beloved Mount Vernon to accept the Presidency. Perhaps no other man could have led the infant Nation safely out of the anarchy and threatened dissolution of the Confederation period. Certainly it was clear, as Mr. Roosevelt said, that "if the new Government, under the Constitution, should fail in its early days, the several States falling out among themselves would become so many small and weak nations subject to attack and conquest from overseas."

In that speech yesterday afternoon President Roosevelt looked back, to the days when Washington guided the steps of the United States along the difficult path which has led to our present dominant position. And yesterday morning President Roosevelt looked around him, to see not 13 newly independent colonies but 21 American nations as "a great co-operative group facing a troubled world in serenity and calm."

The experimental American Union of 1789 was lineal ancestor to the developing Pan-American community of 1939. The ideal of the community of nations, the President pointed out, "sprang up at the same time that the Americas became free and independent." It is that ideal which has "gradually brought together the Pan-American group of governments." It is that ideal, made realistic by the demands of a dynamic civilization, which is today making collective action by the Western Hemisphere as natural a procedure as was collective action by the North American colonies a century and a half ago.

President Roosevelt, however, did more yesterday than take notice of an obvious historical trend. He also forwarded that trend, in no uncertain manner, when he pledged that the United States will match "force to force" in defending the solidarity of the Americas. And Canada, he took occasion to repeat, can also count on American support if that Dominion is ever "attacked from overseas."

Yesterday, in two brief but very important speeches, the President looked back and looked around, noting the continuity and the logic of our development as a world power. Then, with a wisdom which the times make ripe, he looked ahead. "We have an interest," he truly said, "wider than that of the mere defense of our sea-ringed continent."

How that interest will develop is far less clear than the certainty that it will develop. A major war in Europe would, like the last conflict, threaten our physical involvement. It is not thus that America wishes to exert her influence. Therefore the President pleads for an end to those acts of aggression which were normal to "the Huns and Vandals 1,500 years ago."

It is impossible to doubt the accuracy of Mr. Roosevelt's prediction that the eventual contribution of America to the world community will be great. That is ordained by the power of this country, now naturally assuming that sense of responsibility which must ever be a concomitant of power. But in what way this coming contribution will be made is today, like so much else, uncertain. The answer depends on those two dictators who "are not prisoners of fate, but only prisoners of their own minds."

Those dictators cannot prevent the orderly consolidation of international life which must proceed if modern civilization is to endure. And American participation in that consolidation is, as the President says, ordained. The question is only whether it shall come peacefully, or be terribly distorted by the cataclysm of war. That question Hitler and Mussolini now confront. What President Roosevelt tells them is that, whether the course be peace or war, "we too have a stake in world affairs."

The District Tax Bill

It would be easy to condemn the District tax bill as a hodgepodge of previously rejected levies or as another evasion of the clear responsibility of Congress to enact a modern, equitable revenue law for the Capital. But such criticism would ignore several positive advantages which the bill offers.

Experts as well as citizen groups have repeatedly pointed out the need for a wider tax base in the District. Too much of the burden of municipal government has fallen upon the owners of real estate. The present bill would permit reduction of the real estate levy from $1.75 to $1.50 per $100 valuation. Additional revenue would be obtained from a variety of new taxes on sales, personal income, corporate earnings, on parking lots, utilities and motor vehicles. So the measure does achieve the desired objective of diversification.

It follows that the proposed taxes would not impose a heavy burden on any particular group. The proposed sales tax, while still objectionable, has been reduced from 2 to 1 per cent. The income tax would hit only salaries above $10,000 and unearned income of more than $500. At least those provisions should make the principle of an income tax for Washington more palatable to Congressmen. They are a positive, even though short, step in the direction of taxation according to ability to pay.

Critics of the bill should not forget, moreover, that it would eliminate two objectionable levies now being collected—the business privilege tax and the intangible personal property tax.

One other commendable feature of the bill is the flexibility it would permit. Without further action of Congress the District Commissioners could adjust the real estate levy to produce sufficient revenue to balance the budget. In this way they could raise as much as $3,500,000 over the yield now contemplated. Congress should thus be relieved of the obligation of enacting another District tax bill for a number of years.

All of these advantages offered by Representative Nichols' bill will not, of course, overcome the deep-seated objections to a sales tax levied upon rich and poor alike. The bill would be far more acceptable with this section eliminated. Fortunately, the way is open for either the full District Committee or the House itself to strike out this general nuisance tax. All that is necessary is substitution of the Overton bill on fiscal relations for this unpopular and unreasonable levy. The Overton bill, basing the Federal contribution to the District on the amount of land the Government has withdrawn from taxation here, would give the local community more revenue than the sales tax. But the excess could be used to great advantage to improve public health, education and similar community services.

In any event, the Overton formula ought to be given a definite place on the calendars of both houses of Congress as an essential complement to the local tax bill.

With Presidential Aid

President Roosevelt's continuing interest in reorganization of the District government greatly strengthens the hope for enactment of the bill growing out of the Griffenhagen survey. The greatest danger confronting the bill is not want of merit or even opposition to some specific provisions but rather apathy on the part of Congress. If the President takes a positive stand in support of its general principles, the bill should immediately become an active issue in Congress.

It is true, of course, that the legislative calendars of both the Senate and House are crowded by measures of national and international importance. On the other hand, this is not an election year. Congressmen do not need to rush home to mend political fences. Moreover, Congress as a whole is as free from political motives as it is likely to be at any time in the near future. In that respect the time is propitious for the enactment of a new organic law for the Capital City. It would be a serious mistake to let this opportunity pass without an earnest effort to bring about the desired reorganization.

President Roosevelt has indicated that he will reveal his views of the Griffenhagen plan when he has had an opportunity to scrutinize the tentative bill. Many citizens hope that he will not only express his opinions but will also send a special message to Congress positively recommending the creation of a full-fledged municipal government for the District. The President may have some desirable changes to suggest. But even if he merely commends to Congress the general objective of a unified, responsible government for Washington, he will render a great service to this politically impotent community.

Plea for Isolation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my opinion the best policy for the United States in the event of an European war is complete isolation. The opponents of this policy say that we are too dependent on European trade, and that we have too many foreign commitments to keep neutral. The most obvious answer to this remark is that the loss of men that a war would entail far outweighs any monetary and economic considerations.

Are we so enslaved to gold that we must fight and lose our lives for it? Perhaps it would mean even an economic revolution in this country, but would that not be better than several million Americans lying unnamed and unknown in European soil?

And, after all, what are these bonds that are said to bind us so tightly to Europe, 3,500 miles away. Every year we import butter, eggs and wheat from abroad, thus effectively putting many Americans out of work. We continually sell munitions to Japan while we are wasting our breath in commiseration for the stricken Chinese. Asbestos, rubber, cane sugar and a few other minor commodities are the only things that the United States cannot produce for itself. Are these things worth fighting for?

We know now that war only makes the world safe for the subjugation of nations, business depression and finally more wars. Defense of our own land or South American interests is one thing, but participation in an European war would mean our own destruction.

Jefferson's Economy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is rather amusing to contemplate what Jefferson would have done if he were with us today.

During his lifetime he would not have let the Government spend any money upon a depression and least of all would he have let the expenditure of large amounts for a monument to some individual. He once expressed the idea that monuments should be paid for by individuals.

You may remember when he was elected he would not even use a carriage to go to the Capital to be inaugurated; he rode horseback. On his arrival he tied his horse to a hitching post and unattended took the oath of office.

His actions during his Administration give further proof of his idea of public trust. He cut many employes off the public pay roll. He reduced the number in the Army and the Navy. His idea was always to spend only what could be paid for, and once he demanded that bills be not left for future citizens to pay.

What a difference it would make if the present Government went on a pay-as-you-go basis for non-liquidating expenditures and all current expenses.

Yours for a new Jeffersonian government and Congressmen who won't spend millions for non-useful memorials.

The Dyer Plan Of "Euthanasia"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that Maj. Edward L. Dyer, speaking before the Washington Society for Philosophical Inquiry, favors enthanasia, or "mercy killings," of persons 70 or 75 years of age who are on relief. He also advocates death for the hopelessly insane, first-degree murderers and for children born hopelessly deformed.

We can all think in terms of capital punishment when we read of sex crimes against tiny children—of the murderer who kills for the thrill of taking human life and for the outlaw who preys upon others. When a child is born hopelessly deformed—death can mean only release. Death may be the "last enemy to be destroyed." But there are times when it seems more a kindly friend than a destroyer.

However, society cannot solve its problems by dealing out death to the aged or the mental and physcial wrecks we see around us. We cannot start at the 70 or 75 year milestone. We can do a better job by starting 70 or 75 years before birth.

Recently the Washington newspapers carried items about 234 unmarried mothers, beginning at 11 years of age. A day or two later there was the item about the great number of syphilitic expectant mothers who were being treated at a local clinic. Not a day passes but we are brought face to face with people who bring children into the world without a thought as to the child's welfare.

The slums of any city teem with hapless children. It seems to me that the job of the thinkers and philosophers would be to prevent such children from being born. I have said time and again that we need a national sterilization law. There should be a rigid physical and mental test before granting a marriage license. Not only should the mentally and physically incompetent be prohibited from reproducing, but those unable to provide for a family financially should share the same fate.

We know that the present trend cannot continue, and yet when there is any talk of reducing the appropriations—we are told that there will be a march here to protest. I can understand how those who pay the bills feel. We are disgusted with the whole set-up, but I cannot see that killing off the aged would help. But we can see to it that helpless children are not brought into the world to suffer for the ignorance, lust and sins of their parents.

MRS. E. D. COOKSEY.
Washington, April 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that Maj. Edward L. Dyer, retired, U. S. A., at a meeting of a society in Washington, in which he is secretary, advocated some form of euthanasia for persons 70 years of age or over who are on the relief rolls, and for certain other incurables within governmental institutions. Offhand I would say that the retired major now, or when he reaches the age of 70, will belong to the first classification, that is, the very comfortable retired pay he receives (which also comes from the taxpayer) is just another form of relief bounty.

JOSEPH NOLL.
Annapolis, Md., April 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To kill old people for the sole purpose of decreasing the amount of money which the Government spends for relief is not "mercy," but rather "merciless" killing.

It seems to me that Maj. Dyer does not read The Washington Post, or he would know of the noble work by which it brings every day the photos and the stories of men and women over 70 who enjoy old age and are very active.

I would like to meet Maj. Dyer no matter how heavy my breathing in his presence would be. I would like to entertain him and all members of the Society for Philosophical Inquiry; to make him prove that his brain is healthier than mine; to make him prove that he is able to memorize poetry and prose as fast as I, the "octogenarian," can; that he has greater physical endurance than I have.

The Old Game of Conquest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although I am a thorough American and of British descent, I wish to offer a few sentences that might bear considering.

1. The citizens of this country should regard the European situation from an absolutely unbiased viewpoint. One cannot take sides and still be neutral.

2. From the beginning of history groups of people have taken the "grabbing" method for developing and enlarging their countries and resources. It is the way of the world, and none of us has clean hands in that respect.

3. Is there any geographical or other reason for England being in the Mediterranean? Italy isn't concerned with the North Sea! Of course, without the Mediterranean, England couldn't remain in India. But by what geographical or other right is she in India? The Hindoos would rather be entirely Hindoo, and England can never hope to absorb that race. She has no right there. If she needed more room, why didn't she try to take over Sweden?

4. Let the Mediterranean be owned by those who live on it. If New York or New Jersey had differences to settle, Texas wouldn't try to interfere. Or if the United States and Canada had trouble, would Arabia come running over to tell us what to do?

5. If we censure Germany and Italy for expanding (as races have done since the beginning), then Holland should not be in Java, nor England in India, nor the United States in the Philippines. And Germany and Italy are not jumping across the world to expand.

6. Of course, when countries want more land, they should buy it, as we did with the Louisiana Purchase and Alaska and the Virgin Islands, or else hold an honest plebiscite.

I do not approve of Germany's or Italy's methods. But are they any worse than some of the "colonizing" that some of the other countries have carried out?

Perhaps, 50 years from now, the Albanians will be very contented Italians, and the Czechs will be happy beer-drinking Germans. And if the other countries will mind their own business, they will have kept their young men for useful citizens instead of throwing them into the maw of a war that never will win anything.

The Fire Budget

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are two uniformed public services in the District, namely, the Police and Fire departments. Why is it that the economy in the 1940 appropriation is centered in the Fire Department? The sum of $56,000 was cut from the budget for firemen's salaries, while the Police Department was allowed funds for an additional 25 men.

It seems to me that the District Committee must have a grudge against the Fire Department or it feels the citizens of Washington should have less fire protection.

I have been a citizen of Washington for many years and a continuous reader of your paper. I feel you have always supported, through the medium of your newspaper, anything that is just.

The Body In The Bag

MARY always had me over to dinner as soon as she knew I had come to town. I had grown not only to expect it, but to demand it. This time we were halfway through one of those gorgeous apple bettys of hers before I noticed that something wasn't quite the same. Something was missing. I looked around, but all the externals of Mary's four-room apartment seemed to be their own dear selves. Finally I stopped dead in my hard sauce and exclaimed:

"Where's the cat? Where's the Friar?"

Mary choked, turned red in the face, and excused herself. Something terrible must have happened to the Friar.

I am no cat lover, as all the vagrant felines in our block well know, but Mary's cat was different. He belonged to Mary's unique menage, which one could not easily imagine as being catless. He was called the Friar because he had a white collar and a sanctimonious expression in his neat face. Furthermore, it was believed that he led the life of a celibate. He had beautiful green eyes, and Mary loved him.

When Mary returned to the dining room I could see that she had been laughing.

"Well," I hazarded, "at least he's not dead."

Strange, but that seemed to set her off again.

"That's just it," she snorted; "he is."

"While you are pouring me another cup of coffee perhaps you can calm yourself to the point of telling me, if you will, just why the Friar's death is so funny," I said. "Perhaps he had a catnip fit."

"I'm sorry. No, I think he had pneumonia. I had a vet and all for him, but I guess he had led the sheltered life too long. I don't think he really suffered much. He just seemed to pass out, sweetly."

"Should I laugh here?"

"Now, please keep your shirt on," Mary continued, "and I'll tell you all about it. I really felt very badly. I cried a little and all that. After all, he was a good cat, wasn't he?"

"Yes, he was a good cat."

"Then I began feeling so sorry for poor little Friar, and I commenced to wonder what I'd do with the body."

"Your apple betty was unusually good tonight, Mary."

"Shut up . . . I laid him out on that yellow sofa pillow over there, and I was seized with an urge to give him a magnificent funeral, in a cat cemetery, you know. Or perhaps I should have him cremated. I wondered whether there were pet undertakers. I looked in the classified, and sure enough there was one listed, and I called 'em up. Yes, madam, they could furnish a very dignified funeral—a little plot, a neat little box, flowers, music—everything complete for only $50. I said I would think it over. Well, it began to strike me that was going a little too far. Don't you think so? I don't think the Friar himself would have wanted me to spend all that money on him—not with so many human beings in need. Do you?"

"No, I don't really. Humanitarian that he was."

"But what was I going to do? I couldn't bear to think of turning him over to the janitor. I wanted at least a decent burial for him. I phoned the S. P. C. A. No, they only cared for live animals. And there was poor Friar all this time, becoming less and less fresh. I was getting worried, and my grief was beginning to wane, too—about the time I got home that second night from work and saw poor limp Friar still lying there."

"Yeah, I can imagine."

"Finally it dawned on me. I would call up Cousin Malcolm out on the farm at Spencerville. You know—where we went that Sunday. 'Of course, we'll take care of your kitty,' said Malcolm. 'Bring him out any time; we'll put him out under the Bartlett pear tree by the fence right next to Billy's dog.' You haven't any idea what a sigh of relief I sighed, by my cat wasn't buried yet. The next problem was to get him out there. I finally worked it all out. I wrapped the poor thing in the society section of the Sunday paper, packed him neatly in that old black knit bag of mine and headed for the Spencerville bus line."

"Do you remember, wasn't it DeWolfe Hopper who used, to come out between the acts of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas and recite a piece with the refrain: 'With the Body in the Bag'? Well, sir, that's what I was thinking of as I stood there waiting for the bloomin' bus, my package gently resting on the curb. I must have got to dreaming, for the next thing I knew my bag was gone. Someone had snatched it and was running down the street, and some people were yelling 'Stop thief!'

"I don't know what I said, but it was to the effect that it was nothing at all—don't yell—let him go. And he went. And before I knew it the bus had come, and I was so bewildered that it never occurred to me that now I didn't need to go. I was halfway to Spencerville before it came over me how funny it all was, and everybody in the bus thought I was nuts. I kept thinking about the expression on that man's face when he opened the bag for his groceries."

We took our coffee and went over to the settee and sat down by the yellow pillow.

"But I had a wonderful country dinner out at Malcolm's," Mary continued, "and what do you think? He offered me another cat. But I turned him down. I turned him down. I have had my cat, and that's that."

Some Travelers

MRS. MARY FAHNESTOCK'S boys, Bruce and Sheridan, sailed a schooner to the South Seas and wrote a book about it with the engaging title, "Stars to Windward." Their plucky mother, suddenly widowed and fearful for her sons on the winter Atlantic, overtook them at Panama and sailed with them as far as the Fijis. From very British Suva she made her way home by slow stages via Ceylon and Egypt, financing her passage with a handful of pearls which native divers on lonely Penrhyn Island had prodigally lavished on the kindly white matron.

In the meantime she had spent several months on Tahiti, whose sybaritic blandishments she distrusted, as though she, too, might yield to its seductive lure and "go native" like any beachcomber. Mrs. Fahnestock would doubtless be the last person to claim that in "I Ran Away to Sea at Fifty" (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50) she had written a great travel book. It is a rambling series of personal impressions of places and people and of discomforts and disappointments which she endured bravely and uncomplainingly. But middle-aged women who take their adventure vicariously or relive it in long retrospect should find its earthy honesty more suited to their time of life than young Mr. Haliburton's romantic goings-on.

RACHEL FRANCK is the wife of Harry, the indefatigable globe-trotter. Being a highly literate and intelligent woman, it was apparently inevitable that she should write her story of what it means to be married to a rover. As an American housewife in strange places, she gives the homely details of everyday life that many stay-at-home women have always yearned to know, but never find in the ordinary travel book.

She tells of the trials of bearing and raising children in outlandish countries, or renting houses where there were no real estate agents or classified ads, of running a household without elementary conveniences of food and markets and servants and clothing and baths and trains and the weather. Resourceful and observing, Mrs. Franck in "I Married a Vagabond" (Appleton-Century, $3.50) has filled the gaps in the many books which her husband has written about faraway lands, for only a woman could have written of these very important things with such comprehension.

MANY HAVE sailed a schooner over the beaten tracks of the sea, but few have navigated a two-master with more consummate skill than did young Richard Maury. Fewer still have written of their voyagings with such deep feeling or rare beauty. The Cimba was a tiny harbor boat of a mere 5 tons, unused to the open ocean, when Maury and a single companion took her in midwinter from Nova Scotia to the Caribbean by way of Long Island Sound and Bermuda. She survived a storm that sent several larger ships to the bottom, though for a brief moment she turned turtle in a savage night sea.

From the isthmus, Maury drove her down to the mysterious Galapagos, then westward before the trades to the Marquesas, Tahiti and Samoa to a tragic denouement at Fiji. But the book is much more than a mere exctalogue of islands. The little schooner gradually takes form as something animate, as a living being graceful and eager and strong, until she seems to become one with her skipper like some centaur of the sea. "The Saga of the Cimba" (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50) is a book of unusual charm, is recommended as a gift for any boy with a vision of far places in his eyes. But if the boy should some day be missing, the giver might look seaward for a white sail beating down toward the open spaces of the wide, green waters.

CORPORAL MONTAGUE, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was dumped down on the barren shores of Hudson Strait with a Bible, a load of lumber, a year's food supply, and other paraphernalia necessary for establishing a patrol base in the Arctic wilderness. His only companion was a fellow "mountie." Together they erected a post building and soon came to represent the authority of the Dominion among the Eskimo or Inuit tribes over a vast territory roundabout.

Montague learned the difficult language of the natives, earned their respect and loyalty, shared their dangers and hardships, and adopted many of their ways of life that were tested in the hard school of the north. The most interesting parts of this remarkable book are those in which the author gives his observations on the civilization of the Inuits. With an understanding far beyond his years—for he was in his early twenties—he expresses his deep admiration for the fine traits of his unspoiled charges and friends. Admitted into the tribal bonds, he brought back after three years of service a rare knowledge and appreciation of these peoples of the ice barrens.

His book, "North to Adventure" (McBride, $2), is full of adventures and narrow escapes from death at the hands of polar bears and walruses and drifting ice and starvation. And all through it runs a rich strain of humor, as he tells of the efforts of the natives to adjust themselves too literally to the precepts and customs of the white man.

This Monstrous War

AS THE REPORTS come in from every quarter, with news of fleets in movement and of armies mobilizing, of threats and defiances, the tightening tension is becoming more than human nerves can endure. Unless some way is found to relax the pressure, it is hard to imagine how Europe can go on very much longer without an explosion. For this monstrous war, which will decimate a generation, impoverish the whole world, and barbarize the civilized peoples, is rapidly being accepted as unavoidable, as fatally inescapable.

It is this mood of tragic resignation that paralyzes the peoples, who in the overwhelming majority everywhere still pray for peace, and their governments, no one of which can contemplate this war without realizing its dreadful consequences. We dare not let ourselves be overwhelmed by this hopeless and helpless despair. Too much that men hold sacred, too much of the happiness and dignity of this generation and of its descendants, is at stake, to justify our accepting as unavoidable so great a catastrophe. As long as there is still no war, we cannot and must not admit that there is no alternative to this war.

We see the Rome-Berlin axis with it Japanese associate confronting the Franco-British coalition with its Polish, Turkish, and probably Russian associates. In this alignment, the British and French are staking their hopes of averting war, and their hopes of survival if war comes, on their ability to withstand the first onslaught and in the end to defeat the axis by a war of exhaustion. Their policy is based on the belief that by demonstrating to Germany and Italy that the war cannot be won, Hitler and Mussolini will be deterred from starting it.

Dictators Assured Of U. S. Intentions

THE PRESIDENT'S policy is based on the same belief, and, acting on this belief, he has done everything he could to convince Hitler and Mussolini that they must take into account the probability that the United States will sell arms to the coalition and that it will help them to resist. He is asking the Germans and Italians not to deceive themselves by assuming that the principle of the Nye neutrality act could long survive the outbreak of actual war, and he is hoping, we may assume, that this practical warning will help to persuade them before it is too late.

There are Senators who say that the President has no authority to put the dictators on notice, and they are declaring to the world that the President's warnings may be disregarded. But though these Senators are men of standing and influence, the Germans and Italians cannot afford to disregard the warnings of the President of the United States. If these warnings were based only on what the President wants to do and means to do, they might conceivably be discounted in some measure. But these warnings are more than the statement of an Administration policy; they are a description of the way national opinion is reacting, and of how it almost certainly will react, if the axis attacks the western democracies. The President is not making threats. He is simply telling the truth while it is still time for the Germans and Italians to consider it in their calculations.

If the President failed to tell them the truth, he could be charged with misleading them. For if he let them think that Mr. Nye's neutrality law will determine American behavior in a world war, he would be letting the dictators believe something of vital importance that would almost certainly not be true. If the dictators make their decisions on the assumption that Mr. Nye and not Mr. Roosevelt will control American policy in the event of war, they will be grossly and dangerously deceived. Insofar as they believe that Britain and France cannot obtain war materials from America and that, therefore, the risk of war is worth taking, they will be fooling themselves. These warnings from the President are intended to prevent the dictators from fooling themselves.

President's Warnings Are Not Merely Bluff

THAT THE PRESIDENTS warnings are not mere words, and are not bluff and not the expressions of a personal whim, is evident the moment one realizes the situation which would exist if the axis attacked the British and French. There is, to begin with, no question as to what is the overwhelming moral sympathy of the American people. This sympathy would be intensified enormously the moment a country like Switzerland or Holland was invaded, the moment cities were bombed from the air, and ships were sunk in the Atlantic by submarine and airplane.

Try then to imagine the state of mind of the American people when they found that, under Mr. Nye's law, weapons for the defense of Holland, Switzerland, France and Great Britain could not be sold in this country. Try to imagine the state of affairs in which, with popular sympathy against the aggressors, the Administration was compelled by law to assist the Nazi-Fascist submarines and airplanes to cut off vital supplies to the democracies fighting for their existence.

Can anyone imagine such a contradiction between public sentiment and governmental action enduring very long? If he cannot imagine it, and I doubt whether anyone can imagine it, then it is the part of elementary prudence and of elementary honesty in dealing with the German and Italian nations to save them now from the peril of self-deception.

Seeking To Prevent, Not Incite A War

SUCH WARNINGS are not incitements to war. They are necessary measures in order to prevent war. If Mr. Roosevelt were plotting war, if he wanted war in order to have a third term or something of that sort, he would do just the opposite of what he is doing. He would say nothing. He would let the dictators think that America was safely and surely going to cut off supplies from their victims, and having laid this trap for them, he would let them walk into it blindly. That would be the most likely way to bring on the war that they accuse him of trying to incite.

What he is actually doing is to tell them in advance, before they are committed, how great are the risks, hoping that they will not commit themselves. The President may fail. The dictators may disregard his warning. They may discount the help that America is able to give. They may feel compelled to take the risks anyway.

But at least it will not be said in the years to come that, in the face of this great catastrophe, the policy of the United States was to do nothing and to let her rip.

Off-Hand Remarks

By Mark Sullivan

President Criticised

THE CONSEQUENCES of what happened at President Roosevelt's press conference a few days ago have been such that Mr. Roosevelt might reasonably give thought to a serious question, namely, whether off-hand remarks at a press conference is the best way for a President to make important announcements of foreign policy.

Indeed, Mr. Roosevelt has occasion to remember what President Wilson discovered in 1913. Wilson had entered the White House with strong emphasis on publicity—the Government's business was to be conducted behind glass through which all could see, the White House doors were to be always open. In that spirit, Wilson made his press conferences more frank and informal than they had ever been—in fact Wilson was the first President to hold regular press conferences in the modern way. But when foreign relations entered the news, even in the mild form of difficulty with Mexico, Wilson discovered it was imprudent to give off-hand answers to questions about international affairs. Wilson ended his press conferences, and was saved much embarrassment after the Great War began.

Editorial Stated His Viewpoint

MR. ROOSEVELT, when leaving Warm Springs last week, said: "I'll be back in the fall if we don't have a war." This remark caused discussion. Queried about it at his first press conference following his return to Washington, Mr. Roosevelt referred to an editorial in that morning's Washington Post. He was so surprised, he said, to find himself so well understood that when he read the editorial he almost fell out of bed. The editorial, he said, was very clear. It was so accurate an interpretation that he told the press conference stenographer to include the editorial in his notes, so that posterity would know just what he meant.

THE EDITORIAL is too long to reprint entire, and so close-woven that detached quotations from it would not be adequate. I here make a condensation which I think conveys its sense and spirit.

Mr. Roosevelt's words at Warm Springs were spoken deliberately, after serious consideration, with the intention of impressing both America and Europe. The impending catastrophe in Europe has tremendous implications for ever citizen of the United States. American involvement is virtually certain. Until it has actually started, another world war is not inevitable. It can still be averted if the free nations, including the United States, are willing to show that they will take a stand before it is too late. Nothing less than the show of preponderant force will stop the German and Italian dictators, for force is the only language they understand. The President told Hitler and Mussolini that the tremendous force of the United States must be a factor in their current thinking. He made it plain that a war forced by them would from the outset involve the destinies of a nation which, as they realize, is potentially far stronger than Germany and Italy united. To make that plain at this crucial time is to help in preventing war. It is on that reasoning, through the application of which peace can still be saved, that President Roosevelt properly links the United States with the eleventh-hour effort to avert a shattering disaster.

Called Formidable Policy Declaration

THAT IS THE condensation of the editorial which Mr. Roosevelt indorsed and embodied in his own press conference remarks as expressing his and America's policy with respect to conditions in Europe. As a declaration of policy it is extremely formidable and portentous. It is a long distance from the policy President Wilson had not only preceding the Great War but for more than two years after it began, the policy of being "impartial in thought as well as in action."

As to the substance of Mr. Roosevelt's policy, some Americans agree, others dissent. Aside from the substance, there is the question of manner. To practically all, the manner must be disquieting. Nearly everybody would feel better if Mr. Roosevelt, when he has an important declaration of foreign policy to make, would call in his Secretary of State, Mr. Hull, and such other advisers as have official responsibility; write the declaration very carefully, and give it to the world only after it has had the benefit of the best and most careful thought. If we have ahead of us a condition in which there is going to be an obligation upon the people to support whatever the President does, the people ought to be permitted to have confidence that what the President does is the fruit of deliberation and prudence, including the prudence of more than one man.

Cryptic Innuendo Assailed By Writer

FURTHER, declarations of policy ought to be clear, forthright and unmistakable. They ought not to come in the form of cryptic innuendo, such as the sentence Mr. Roosevelt uttered at Warm Springs.

Many who agree with Mr. Roosevelt's policy up to a certain point have misgivings about the way it is carried on. Sometimes it almost seems as if America were made to appear overeager to get into the situation. There was widsom in something that Mr. Roy Howard, head of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, cabled from Europe the other day. It was put in the form of analogy to football. Mr. Howard said America's role for the present should be to "play back for a while, instead of running interference."

Text Of President Roosevelt's Pan-American Day Address

The American family of nations pays honor today to the oldest and most successful association of sovereign governments which exists in the world.

Few of us realize that the Pan American organization as we know it has now attained a longer history and a greater catalogue of achievements than any similar group known to modern history. Justly we can be proud of it. With even more right we can look to it as a symbol of great hope at a time when much of the world finds hope dim and difficult. Never was it more fitting to salute Pan American Day than in the stormy present.

For upwards of half a century the republics of the Western world have been working together to promote their common civilization under a system of peace. That venture, launched so hopefully 50 years ago, has succeeded; the American family is today a great co-operative group facing a troubled world in serenity and calm.

This success of the Western Hemisphere is sometimes attributed to good fortune. I do not share that view. There are not wanting here all of the usual rivalries, all of the normal human desires for power and expansion, all of the commercial problems. The Americas are sufficiently rich to have been themselves the object of desire on the part of overseas governments; our traditions in history are as deeply rooted in the Old World as are those of Europe.

Same Diversities Of Race, Custom

It was not accident that prevented South America, and our own West, from sharing the fate of other great areas of the world in the nineteenth century. We have here diversities of race, of language, of custom, of natural resources, and of intellectual forces at least as great as those which prevailed in Europe.

What was it that has protected us from the tragic involvements which are today making the Old World a new cockpit of old struggles. The answer is easily found. A new, and powerful ideal—that of the community of nations—sprang up at the same time that the Americas became free and independent. It was nurtured by statesmen, thinkers and plain people for decades. Gradually it brought together the Pan American group of governments; today it has fused the thinking of the peoples, and the desires of their responsible representatives toward a common objective.

The result of this thinking has been to shape a typically American institution. This is the Pan American group, which works in open conference, by open agreement. We hold our conferences not as a result of wars, but as the result of our will to peace.

Elsewhere in the world, to hold conferences such as ours, which meet every five years, it is necessary to fight a major war, until exhaustion or defeat at length brings governments together to reconstruct their shattered fabrics.

Greeting a conference at Buenos Aires in 1936, I took occasion to say:

"The madness of a great war in another part of the world would affect us and threaten our good in a hundred ways. And the economic collapse of any nation or nations must of necessity harm our own prosperity. Can we, the republics of the New World, help the Old World to avert the catastrophe which impends? Yes, I am confident that we can."

I still have that confidence. There is no fatality which forces the Old World towards new catastrophe. Men are not prisoners of fate, but only prisoners of their own minds. They have within themselves the power to become free at any moment.

Only a few days ago the head of a great nation referred to his country as a "prisoner" of the Mediterranean. A little later, another chief of state, on learning that a neighbor country had agreed to defend the independence of another neighbor, characterized that agreement as a "threat," and an "encirclement." Yet there is no such thing as encircling, or threatening, or imprisoning any peaceful nation by other peaceful nations. We have reason to know this in our own experience.

For instance, on the occasion of a visit to the neighboring Dominion of Canada last summer, I stated that the United States would join in defending Canada were she ever attacked from overseas. Again at Lima, in December, the 21 American nations joined in a declaration that they would co-ordinate their common efforts to defend the integrity of their institutions from any attack direct or indirect.

At Buenos Aires, in 1936, all of us agreed that in the event of any war, or threat of war, on this continent we would consult together to remove or obviate that threat. Yet in no case did any American nation regard any of these understandings as making any one of them a "prisoner," or as "encircling" any American country, or as a threat of any sort or kind.

Measures of this kind, taken in this hemisphere, are taken as guarantees not of war, but of peace, for the simple reason that no nation on this hemisphere has any will to aggression, or any desire to establish dominance or mastery. Equally, because we are interdependent, and because we know it, no American nation seeks to deny any neighbor access to the economic and other resources which it must have to live in prosperity.

In these circumstances, dreams of conquest appear to us as ridiculous as they are criminal. Pledges designed to prevent aggression, accompanied by the open doors of trade and intercourse, and bound together by common will to co-operate peacefully, make warfare between us as outworn and useless as the weapons of the Stone Age. We may proudly boast that we have begun to realize in Pan American relations what civilization in intercourse between countries really means.

If that process can be successful here, is it too much to hope that a similar intellectual and spiritual process may succeed elsewhere? Do we really have to assume that nations can find no better methods of realizing their destinies than those which were used by the Huns and Vandals 1,500 years ago?

American peace which we celebrate today has no quality of weakness in it. We are prepared to maintain it, and to defend it to the fullest extent of our strength, matching force to force if any attempt is made to subvert our institutions, or to impair the independence of any one of our group.

Should the method of attack be that of economic pressure, I pledge that my own country will also give economic support, so that no American nation need surrender any fraction of its sovereign freedom to maintain its economic welfare. This is the spirit and intent of the declaration of Lima: the solidarity of the continent.

The American family of nations may also rightfully claim, now, to speak to the rest of the world. We have an interest, wider than that of the mere defense of our sea-ringed continent. We know now that the development of the next generation will so narrow the oceans separating us from the Old World, that our customs and our actions are necessarily involved with hers.

Beyond question, within a scant two years air fleets will cross the ocean as easily as today they cross the closed European seas. Economic functioning of the world becomes increasingly a unit; no interruption of it anywhere can fail, in the future, to disrupt economic life everywhere.

An Example For Europe

The past generation in Pan American matters was concerned with constructing the principles and the mechanisms through which this hemisphere would work together. But the next generation will be concerned with the methods by which the New World can live together with the Old.

The issue is really whether our civilization is to be dragged into the tragic vortex of unending militarism punctuated by periodic wars, or whether we shall be able to maintain the ideal of peace, individually, and civilization as the fabric of our lives. We have the right to say that there shall not be an organization of world affairs which permits us no choice but to turn our countries into barracks, unless we are to be vassals of some conquering empire.

The truest defense of the peace of our hemisphere must always lie in the hope that our sister nations beyond the seas will break the bonds of the ideas which constrain them toward perpetual warfare. By example we can at least show them the possibility. We, too, have a stake in world affairs.

Our will to peace can be as powerful as our will to mutual defense; it can command greater loyalty, devotion and discipline than that enlisted elsewhere for temporary conquest or equally futile glory. It will have its voice in determining the order of world affairs.

This is the living message which the New World can send to the Old. It can be light opening on dark waters. It shows the path of peace.

The Once Over

Reactions To The Air-Conditioned Circus

I am unopposed to fragrance—
I'm esthetic to the core;
Perfumes rarely fail to get me—
Honeyed scents I quite adore.
Stuffy atmospheres offend me
To a point where I can yell,
But I still prefer my circus
With that good old-fashioned smell.

II

Air conditioning is splendid—
I'm a ventilation nut;
I like clean air in abundance
And my atmosphere uncut;
You may purify the ozone
'Til from any taint it's free,
But the old-style smelling circus,
It was good enough for me!

III

You can spray things in my office,
Also atomize my home;
Flood the subway car with Guerlain,
Spread scents anywhere I roam;
You can treat the railroad coaches—
Give the big tent air and sun...
But a camel is a camel
And will always smell like one.

IV

You can scrub the circus wagons,
You can bathe each pachyderm;
Make the tanbark smell of roses
With a resolution firm;
You can sprinkle rarest perfumes
On each horse or ape or gnu...
But all llamas smell like llamas
And there's nothing you can do.

V

You can see that all performers
Use the scents of Araby;
That the best attar of roses
Reaches each menagerie;
You can wash the sacred oxen
And rub Chanel in their pelts...
But a leopard is a leopard
And can smell like nothing else.

VI

Go ahead with modern treatments
Air conditioning's the thing;
There are odors which, I grant you
To a circus need not cling;
I don't mind the march of progress
And I don't resist in much . . .
But an elephant I favor
With no Matchabelli touch.

VII

Let the clowns cavort in bath suits
And the gymnasts do the same;
Dip the strong man in some perfume
Of the very widest fame;
Stage a ventilation orgy
With devices new and crack...
But when I can't smell a zebra
You can TAKE THAT CIRCUS BACK!

Throwback To 1914

By Barnet Nover

Europe's Two Camps

HISTORY rarely repeats itself. Between the situation in Europe today and what it was on the eve of the World War vast differences obtain. But in one tremendously significant particular the Old World is back where it was a quarter of a century ago.

Now, as then, Europe is divided into two camps of approximately equal strength. That is important. What is even more important is that each of the opposing coalitions is determined to prevent the other side from getting stronger, while doing everything possible to increase its own strength. Thus it is that at the present moment, as in 1914, Europe's peace is at the mercy of an incident.

In 1914, no one of the major powers wanted a general war. No major power wants it now. Great Britain and France certainly do not desire it. Russia doesn't want it, and it is doubtful in the extreme whether either Nazi Germany or Fascist Italy look forward to such a conflict with any degree of equanimity. But now, as then, Europe may be plunged into war through the very dynamics of the situation.

In 1914, Germany's interest in the fate of Serbia was negligible. Her support of the Austrian plan to take strong action against that little Slavic country arose out of the feeling in Berlin that such action was needed to bolster up the disintegrating empire of the Hapsburgs. What Germany feared was that the collapse of Austria-Hungary, or even its further weakening, would place the Reich in a precariously isolated position.

On the other hand, Great Britain came reluctantly to the support of France, and thus of Serbia, out of the belief that a further expansion of German power in Europe would imperil the security of Great Britain and the British Empire, a consideration which had previously led the British government to end its historic feuds with France and Russia.

BETWEEN 1918 and 1935 Europe enjoyed a period of relative peace. Those nations, such as Germany and Italy, which wanted the status quo modified in their favor, were in that period distinctly inferior in economic, financial and military power to the nations which wanted the status quo maintained.

Since 1935, however—that is, beginning with the rearmament of Germany and the Ethiopian War—a fundamental change has occurred in the European balance of power. Pooling their strength, capitalizing on the intense pacifism which obtained in the powerful democracies of western Europe and on the sense of guilt arising out of the belief that the Versailles Treaty was an evil document, the totalitarian powers were permitted to upset the status quo.

They did it one move at a time. And no one action they took appeared, in the eyes of Great Britain and France, of sufficient importance to fight over. That remained true up to and for a period following the Munich settlement.

SINCE THEN, however, Great Britain and France have definitely become persuaded that the period of grace which successive surrenders to the Fascist powers had vouchsafed them is drawing to its close. Should these surrenders continue, with one independent nation after another disappearing into the maws of the Third Reich and the Mussolinian empire, the day would not be distant when the British and French empires and Great Britain and France themselves would be threatened and under circumstances distinctly unfavorable to the democracies.

NEITHER Great Britain nor France has the slightest desire to attack Germany or Italy. They want only to live in peace with those nations and all other nations, whatever their political systems and ideologies may be. But they are convinced that a similar state of mind does not prevail in Berlin and Rome. The destruction of Czecho-Slovakia, the seizure of Albania, have shattered any illusion they may have had on that score. And that is why they are making these last-minute efforts to redress the balance of power by accumulating new allies.

In the past month Poland, Rumania and Greece have more or less reluctantly joined the Anglo-French camp. Turkey may do so in the near future and so may Soviet Russia. The balance of power, which has been swinging in the direction of the Berlin-Rome axis, is now shifting in favor of the Paris-London combination. Should that process continue, the Nazi dream of European hegemony, the Fascist dream of a twentieth century Roman empire, would become incapable of realization.

WERE THE totalitarian states other than they are, that might not matter. With the way to further expansion blocked, they could settle down to digesting the gains they have already made. But it is of the very nature of their systems that they cannot settle down. They have spent their substance in building up impressive war machines.

This apparatus of power has enable them to win a long succession of victories, in Germany's case by intimidation alone. They cannot safely dismantle these war machines. Demobilization means destruction. Rather than risk such destruction from within by accepting the status quo they may take the chance of continuing along the course they have for so long followed, testing out the enemy at his weakest point, moving forward with lightning strokes and, if necessary, risking war.

For time, they may realize, is not on their side. With time the Anglo-French combination may achieve so impressive a preponderance of power as to make an attack upon it foolhardy in the extreme. Why wait, Hitler and Mussolini may be asking themselves? And there is very real danger that they may not. Sarajevo may have a sequel.

In the evening Dr. Holloman will deliver the annual sermon for the Order of Moses. The anniversaries are being celebrated from April 11 to April 23.

Church of the Week

Mount Tabor Methodist Protestant Church Fears No Summer Slump This Year

Young People's Club, Ladies Aid, Bible Class Are Active

The approaching summer and its lure of the out-of-doors will bring no slump in the activities of Mount Tabor Methodist Protestant Church, insists the Rev. Kenneth Lyons, leader of the Georgetown congregation.

"As a matter of fact, we expect things to be going full blast here during the coming months," he said yesterday while seated in the parsonage near the edifice at Wisconsin avenue and Thirty-fifth street northwest.

Echoing his remarks was J. T. Huddleston, 76-year-old chairman of the official board, who dropped by to add his bit to the story of the congregation with which he has been connected 25 years and which was formally organized in 1887 after several years as a mission of Congress Heights Methodist Protestant Church.

Huddleston

Among the church's most interesting groups is the Young People's Club, which is providing a well-rounded spiritual and recreational program—not only for members of Mount Tabor, but also for other young people of Georgetown, irrespective of religious affiliation.

Led by Miss Agnes Robertson and Mrs. Virginia Lindberg, also superintendent and assistant, respectively, of the Sunday school, the young people meet once weekly for roller-skating, bowling and other recreational purposes and on Sundays for devotionals, and have captured many banners at District youth assemblies. Miss Eunice Pigg is president of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Another enthusiastic organization which expects to keep things humming at Mount Tabor is the Ladies Aid Society, with Mrs. Ernst Bachschmid as acting president, and which assumes responsibility for dinners and other social functions.

Rev. Mr. Lyons

In addition, there is the Men's and Women's Bible Class, taught by Dr. Samuel A. Jones; the Boy and Girl Scout troops and the Missionary Society, the latter under the direction of Mrs. Charles Wanger. Mrs. Morris Hess is chairman of stewards.

Once colloquially known as "The Butchers' Chapel" because of the large number of families of that occupation affiliated with it, Mount Tabor has had many interesting personalities as parishioners and pastors. Among them is James H. Straughn, minister from 1901 to 1904 and today president of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The late Thomas Hamilton Lewis, for many years president of Western Maryland College, was an active parishioner, as well as the Weavers and Barneses, old Georgetown families. Among living charter members are Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Barnes, Mrs. Pauline Barnes Woodruff and Mrs. M. F. Knott.

Mrs. Bachschmid

Former chairman of the public meetings committee of the Washington Federation of Churches, the Rev. Mr. Lyons came here in 1934 after serving as pastor at Cumberland, Md. He was educated at Western Maryland College, Westminster Theological Seminary and Highpoint College and is a native of Cambridge. He is chaplain at Mount Alto Hospital, where he conducts services Sunday afternoons.

Ruediger to Speak At Mt. Pleasant

"Amnesia Victims" is the sermon subject of Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, minister of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service.

Dean William C. Ruediger, provost of George Washington University, will speak to the Adult Forum at 10 o'clock on the topic "American Ideals in Education."

Church Building of the Mount Tabor Methodist Protestant Congregation

Grace Church To Continue Easter Theme

Continuing the theme of Easter, at Grace Lutheran Church the pastor, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow on "Post-Easter—A Time for Action." The chorus choir, directed by Erich Mees, upon request—will repeat Easter music as well as new numbers. Marian Ranberg will be organist.

A fellowship supper will be held in the church preceding the D. C. Luther League Federation installation, beginning at 6 p. m.

Concordia Church will install newly elected members of the church council at the 11:15 a. m. service. These are W. F. Herbst, Augustus Becker, jr. Julius Becker, Ernest Gerstenberg, Fred Schultz and Wilber Schmidt. The Rev. Charles Enders will conduct the installation and preach on "From Doubt to Faith."

The Concordians will celebrate their first anniversary in their meeting on Tuesday.

Christ. The Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel will speak on "Thomas, the Most Modern of All the Apostles."

The Walther League will meet at 6 p. m. Representative William J. Boehne will speak at 8 p. m.

St. Paul's. At the morning service the pastor, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, will preach on "When Our Gods Go." In the evening the sermon topic will be "What Christ Means."

Georgetown. "The Three Witnesses" will be the subject at 11 a. m. of the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor.

Reformation. At 8 p. m. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, the pastor, will begin a series of three post-Easter sermons. His first subject will be, "Another Sermon on Worry."

The Rev. Ralph W. Loew assistant pastor, will speak on "Address Known" for the 8:30 matin service.

At 11 o'clock Dr. Blackwelder has chosen for his theme, "The Church and Modern Life." A special meeting of the congregation will be held immediately after his service.

Luther Place. "Beyond Easter we await the Spirit of Pentecost. Easter, which meant life to the Lord, will mean death to the listless. Easter is the birthday of hope; but Pentecost is the birthday of the Church." In keeping with this idea, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen will deliver a series of Pentecost sermons, starting tomorrow with, "What Is the Church?"

Trinity, Mount Rainier. At 11 a. m. the Rev. E. E. Pieplow, pastor, will speak on "The Living Christ in the Church." He will begin a series of sermons at the evening service on "The Lord's Prayer." His first topic is to be "Introduction to the Lord's Prayer, the Fatherhood of God."

Westminster Choir Set at First Baptist

Under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Harwood Hall, alumni of Westminster Choir School at Princeton, N. J., the First Baptist Church here, is to install the Westminster Church music plan.

Members of the congregation will be given individual training and organized into choirs, under the supervision of the Halls, who will become ministers of music.

Dr. Edward H. Pruden, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "A Visible Reminder of God's Promise." In the evening service Dr. Charles E. Resser, of the Smithsonian Institution, will speak on "The Religion of a Scientist."

Metropolitan. Ten services are scheduled tomorrow under the leadership of Dr. John Compton Ball, pastor.

Bible school will meet at 9:30 a. m. A record attendance was established last Sunday with 1,230 present.

At 11 a. m. Dr. Ball will bring a post-Easter message on "The Only Life Worth Living." For the fourth consecutive Sunday a group of new members will be received.

At the evening service at 7:45 p. m., Assistant Pastor Robert Savage will conduct song service and preach on "Frigid, Lukewarm or Hot."

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. La Rue will give a special sermon to recent converts at the morning service entitled "A Sure Double-Hold." He will speak again at the evening hour on "Thomas Was Not There." The Young People's Chorus will sing.

Calvary. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, minister, will preach in the morning on "The Marks of a Loyal Church Member." Loyalty Sunday will be observed at the morning service. "On the Comeback Trail" is the subject of the evening sermon.

Fifth. Tomorrow will be known as "Green Day," for the Sunday school honors Dr. George Green, medical missionary to Nigeria, West Africa, for the past 30 years.

At 10:30 a. m. there will be a missionary program and pageant under the direction of Superintendent Howard Ingram.

Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach at 7:45 p. m. on the subject, "And the Books Were Opened."

First, Hyattsville. Dr. B. P. Robertson will lead his congregation in meditation on "The Characteristics of the Kingdom of God on Earth," at the 11 a. m. service.

The pastor will have charge of the evening service, assisted by young people. His subject will be "The Knowledge of Christ and the Power of His Resurrection."

Chevy Chase. Stewardship Sunday will be observed. The Rev. Edward O. Clark will speak on "The Foolish Farmer," at the 11 o'clock service.

Dr. Arthur Deering Call, secretary of the American Peace Society, will speak on "Have Our Efforts for World Peace Failed?" in the evening service.

Dr. A. D. Berry, Of Tokyo, to Speak at Union

Guest of Edwardses To Preach on 'Two Pictures of Japan'

Dr. Arthur D. Berry, of Tokyo, Japan, who is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. John R. Edwards, at the Union Methodist parsonage, will speak in Union Church at the 11 o'clock worship service tomorrow morning, on "Two Pictures of Japan."

Dr. Berry has lived in Japan for 37 years as a Christian missionary and educator and has had many contacts with leading Japanese. At 8 p. m. Dr. Edwards will deliver a message on "Charm of Spirit," interpreting in a series of services on the Lord's Prayer the petition "Forgive Us Our Trespasses as We Forgive."

Foundry. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris will occupy his pulpit and preach at the 11 o'clock morning service on "Finding a Bird's Nest." He will also administer the rite of baptism.

Miss Mabel Hall, a missionary teacher and evangelist from China, will be guest speaker at the evening service at 8 o'clock.

McKendree. The Rev. Karl G. Newell will be guest preacher at the 11 a. m. service in the Masonic Hall.

The Rev. O. B. Brittingham, of Alexandria, will be guest preacher at the 8 p m. informal song service.

Dr. McCormack's subject is "How Shall Christianity Confront Its Enemies?"

"Dr. Arrowsmith"—a drama picture in colored slides and narrative adapted from the book by Sinclair Lewis and the motion picture of the same name—will be shown at the evening service. A gospel song service from the screen will be another feature.

The Scrooby Club, organization for young adults, meets at 6 o'clock for tea, followed by a program at 6:30 under the direction of Dr. Churchill.

The Tuxis Club, high school and college society, meets at 6:30 and their advisor, Gerald S. Radley, is leading the meeting under the topic, "Building a Philosophy of Life."

A spring sale will be held at the church Thursday with a Dutch dinner served from 6 until 7 p. m., after which there will be a Dutch program featuring pictures of Holland.

DR. W. E. McCORMACK

Metropolitan Presbyterian Is 75 Years Old

Church to Celebrate Birthday Tomorrow; Dr. Fendrich to Speak

Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, at Fourth and B streets southeast, will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary tomorrow.

Organized in a school room at the corner of Third and A streets southeast by the Rev. John Chester on April 11, 1864, its early meetings were held in the House wing of the Capitol.

In 1865, still under the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Chester, who held it for 30 years, a small chapel was built on the present location. In 1868 the present building was erected and the name of the church changed from Capitol Hill Presbyterian to Metropolitan.

Other pastors have been the Rev. G. N. Luccock, 1894-1904; the Rev. Albert Evans, 1904-1909; the Rev. Paul Hickik, 1909-1917, and the Rev. Freeley Rohrer, 1917 to 1937.

The present pastor, Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, jr., was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia, Dubuque University, Salem College, the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton Theological Seminary. He took his M. A. at Salem, has received honorary degrees from several universities, served in the Navy during the World War and later as a psychologist in an Eastern penitentiary.

At the 11 a. m. service tomorrow Dr. Fendrich will preach on "The Power of the Few," and at 7:45 p. m. on "Things Money Can't Buy."

Central. Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor, will preach in the morning on "The Appearances of Jesus" and in the evening on "The Greatest Need of the World."

The Presbytery of Potomac will meet in the Presbyterian Church of Alexandria on Tuesday. This church will be represented by Dr. Taylor and one of the elders.

Covenant-First. Dr. Albert J. McCartney will preach at the 11 o'clock service on "The Undertow of the Eastertide." He will also conduct the vesper service at 5 p. m. on Thursday.

Sherwood. "Is the Christian the Slave of Goodness"? will be the theme of the Rev. Thomas L. Coyle at the 8:50 and 11 a. m. services. At 8 p. m. his subject will be "Destroying the Shrewd."

Gunton-Temple. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor, will take as his subject at the 11 o'clock service, "Memories of Holy Week."

Chevy Chase. "What Remains From Lent" will be the subject of Dr. J. Hillman Hollister's sermon at morning worship.

Mt. Vernon Actors To Present 'Anne Of Green Gables'

Dr. John W. Rustin, minister of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, South, will preach at both morning and evening services tomorrow. His morning sermon subject is "Some Thoughts After Easter." "Talking To One's Self" will be Dr. Rustin's evening subject.

The Mount Vernon Players will present "Anne of Green Gables," three-act comedy, at the church Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8:15. Edward P. Mangum, is director; the cast includes Rachel Reid, Alice Moore, Florence Johnson, Zelda Evans, Evert Bennett, V. V. Mills, Isabel Bennett, Jeannette Vaught, Nadine Johnson, Jane Allan, Sallie Smith, Talma Smith, Harry Brescia and Delma Smith.

Francis Asbury. The pastor, Dr. Robin Gould, will preach at 11 p. m. on "Creative Enthusiasm." At 8 p. m. his theme will be "The Old Rugged Cross."

Boston Choir To Sing at National City

Dr. Miller's Sermon To Be on 'Companions Of the Burning Heart'

"Companions of the Burning Heart" will be the subject of Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller's post-Easter sermon, tomorrow morning at the National City Christian Church.

In the evning, at 7:45, the Choral Art Society of Boston University will present a religious concert. This cathedral choir of 36 voices will sing under the direction of Dr. H. Augustine Smith. The Olympian male quartet of Boston and a violinist also will appear.

Columbia Heights. The Christ Centered Crusade will continue, closing on Pentecost Sunday, May 28. "The Teachings of Jesus" will be the theme for the morning sermons, and in the evenings, "Historical Sketches Following the Footprints of the Master." Tomorrow morning, The Rev. A. P. Wilson's topic will be "What Jesus Teaches About Missions" and in the evening, "The Christ of the Lonesome Road."

A baptismal service will be held tomorrow at 7:30 p. m.

Ninth Street. "The Ascension of Christ" will be subject of the sermon by the Rev. Clifford H. Jope at the 11 a. m. worship and communion hour.

At the 7:45 p. m. service, the pastor will preach on "A Song in the Heart." At this service there will be the famous Cotton Blossom Singers, a colored quartet composed of young men of the student body and faculty of Piney Wood School, an industrial institution for Christian education of negroes in lower Mississippi.

Third. The Rev. C. N. Williams, minister, will preach at morning worship on, "What Road Are We Traveling?"

Capital Church Activities

The newly organized Luther League Federation of local American Lutheran Churches will hold its first installation service tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Grace Church. Officiating as chaplain will be the Rev. George Grewenow, of Faith Church, in Arlington, with Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the religious education committee of the United Lutheran Church as guest speaker.

Vincent Gingerich will be inducted as president, Richard Winkelman, vice president; June Mathes, secretary, and Esther Winkelman, treasurer. An executive committee of 12, selected from constituent leagues, also will be installed.

At Covenant-First Presbyterian Church another installation will be held, preceded by a supper social at 6 p. m. tomorrow Charlotte Braun will be inducted as president of the Covenant Fellowship, Lane C. Kendall, first vice president; Marjorie Swanson, second vice president; Janet Martin, recording secretary; Louise Brown, corresponding secretary; Marjorie Foreman, treasurer, and William Norwood, historian. At the conclusion of the rites, Miss Foreman will speak on "The Missionary Seeks."

The St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek parish, school teachers, at their last meeting, offered 10 scholarships for religious summer schools. Four have been awarded: to Betty Wade Phillips, Margaret Norton, Margaret Mills and Dora Funk. The first three will go to the Shenandoah conference at Camp Overall, Va.; Miss Funk to the Sweet Briar conference.

The All Souls' Unitarian Business and Professional Women's Club will hear Mrs. H. B. Hartwell, secretary of the General Alliance, Boston, at its dinner meeting Wednesday . . . A delegation from the same church, led by Mrs. John P. Strother, president of the Women's Alliance, will attend the meeting of the Southern Neighbors Alliance in Richmond, Thursday and Friday.

Howard Rees will serve as junior pastor as Calvary Baptist Church holds its second annual youth week, beginning Monday. Donald Chase will be his assistant in this program, carried on with great success by youth of hte church last year.

The present European situation will be the subject of a round table discussion by the young people's fellowship of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension in Silver Spring at 7 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. Fritz Karl Mann, professor of political economy at American University, will conduct the discussion.

Henderson Manor, on Sixteenth street, will be the scene of the banquet of the friendly class of Sherwood Presbyterian Sunday School Tuesday evening. The Rev. T. L. Coyle, Sherwood pastor, and Dr. J. L. Fendrich, jr., pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, will speak.

From the inimitable Atonement Luther League Publicizer, Doris Hinsch: "Mrs. J. Huttel and Dr. J. Faris have the league well under control. At the last meeting they elected officers. They are Bill Long, president; Albert Sauer, vice president; George Senholtz, secretary, and Jean Beal, treasurer." Is this democracy, Doris?

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Binnie Barnes Keeps Slender by Limiting Her Weight Gains

IS HOLLYWOOD going too far with its streamlining? Is the vogue for slimness affecting the health of the screen players? Binnie Barnes says it is not, that there doesn't exist a healthier group of people than those appearing in pictures in this country.

Since Miss Barnes comes from England, where the cinema players are allowed to be quite a bit heavier without anybody minding, she might be expected to take a critical view of the insistence on streamlines for our screen. But just the opposite is true. "The Hollywood girls are not doing bad diets any more," she declares. "They are doing good diets and are keeping very healthy."

In general, she thinks that Englishwomen may be a little more sportsminded than American women—"They are terrific tennis players!" But then she very tactfully qualified this comparison by saying that "It may be that they make more noise about their sports in England."

Limits Her Gaining

At any rate, Miss Barnes herself finds tennis an excellent means of keeping fit. She plays a very good game and plays every day that she is not working on a picture. Here are her measurements: Waist, 24 inches; hips, 37½ inches; bust, 36 inches. She is 5 feet 7½ inches tall and weighs 128 pounds.

Miss Barnes has practically no trouble controlling her weight, because as soon as she gains three pounds she goes on a diet composed mainly of vegetables, prepared without salt. That takes care of the three pounds!

With such firm treatment a weight increase never grows up to be a problem. Anyone can take off three pounds—but 30 pounds is quite an order. You couldn't do better than follow Miss Barnes' example and limit your gaining.

Exercise Still Best

Don't be misled by the weight tables and make too much allowance for gaining weight. These tables represent average rather than perfect weights, and according to these calculations a 10-pound gain in 20 years is to be expected. But this is just the reverse of your healthiest weight trend. If you are under 30, the doctors recommend that you be slightly overweight, and if you are past 30, it is considered an advantage to be slightly underweight.

If you start reducing in time, you won't have to follow a diet for more than a week or so. But even on these short term diets, take another tip from Miss Barnes and exercise.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The great Smuggling Cases had us all agog for a while, what with Jack Benny and George Burns standing up before the judges, being scolded and then forced to kick in some thousands of dollars. Both comic stars escaped jail sentences, and since by some strange legal quirk smuggling is a misdemeanor instead of a felony, both kept their rights as citizens.

Oddly enough, the only one to profit from all this smuggling to-do, beside the Government, is a Rosa Weber, who was a housemaid for Mrs. Edgar Lauer and became the informer on this alleged and so-called "smuggling plot." All in all, plump Rosa may collect as rewards some $10,000 for telling the tale on these people—all because she didn't like the way her boss and his dinner guests talked about a certain foreign dictator—whose name is neither Hirohito or Benito.

THE LONG-RUMORED marital split of the John Hay "Jock" Whitneys seems to get more news every day. Now one local gossip has "Jock" on a visit to Paris to see Louise Macy, who toils for a famed fashion mag. This informed gadabout says Miss Macy is to be Mrs. Jock No. 2—when terms of a projected divorce are agreed on. And since Mr. Whitney is said to be worth about $80,000,000, they will probably be some sweet terms—and why not?

Did I tell you how many of our most elegant ladies about the cafes compromised with Holy Week? Oh, of course, they didn't stop going to these swanky saloons—but they did wear beautiful black dresses!

This column appears daily and Sunday.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Restaurant Entertaining, Does Hostess Plan Menu in Advance, or Let Guests Choose?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A friend and I, who are both interested readers of your column, would appreciate it very much if you would help us decide a controversy. My friend says that when a woman invites a few friends, even so few as two, to have lunch with her at a fashionable tea room or country inn, the proper thing for her to do as hostess is to telephone the place ahead of time and decide on a definite luncheon menu.

I say that this is done only for larger luncheon parties, of say eight or more guests, where it is necessary to have such an arrangement in order to save time and avoid confusion. Is it not preferable, in the case of smaller luncheon groups, to have the guests select for themselves from the menu? And don't you think most guests would prefer it that way? My friend thinks there is likely to be embarrassment all around when guests choose for themselves, since they feel they must select something inexpensive.

I cannot agree with her attitude, having been to numerous small luncheons where each guest, without any apparent embarrassment, chose something from among the more expensive items on the menu, following the suggestions or the example of the hostess. Which of us is right, according to modern social usage? We would appreciate an early reply. Sincerely,

INTERESTED READER.

Buying the Groceries

DEAR I. R.: Sticklers for fine points in etiquette will agree with your friend that the hostess who entertains at luncheon or dinner in a restaurant or other public dining place should order the meal in advance, so that the guests may eat what is put before them exactly as if they were being served at the hostess' dining room table. They could cite you chapter and paragraph from weighty tomes on traditional social usage to substantiate their claim.

The tactful sentiment underlying this particular custom has to do, I suppose, with divorcing the gracious gesture of dispensing hospitality, from the pecuniary transaction of ordering and paying for those groceries which the guests have gathered to consume. The real purpose of ordering a restaurant meal in advance is not to deny guests a field day with a la carte items on the menu, but to obviate that subtly embarrassing, all-eyes-averted self-consciousness which sometimes settles over a company when the waiter advances with check and salver.

As one authority on etiquette points out: "For a host to count up the items is suggestive of parsimony, while not to look at them is disconcertingly reckless . . . Therefore, to avoid this whole transaction, people who have not charge accounts, should order the meal ahead, and at the same time pay for it in advance, including the waiter's tip. Charge customers should make arrangements to have the check presented to them elsewhere than at table."

However, the trend of the times is somewhat away from the pretty pretenses of yesteryear, when well-bred persons of substantial means played a make-believe game with each other that the world was waiting to serve them at the lift of a finger, and that there was no such thing as money. Taking a more realistic view of things, they now seem readier to admit that money makes the mare go, and that it's no disgrace to be seen paying your bills. Thus many a high-born lady and gentleman in this year of grace 1939, whose ancestors created those patterns of manners which writers on etiquette still seek to enforce, would think nothing at all of nonchalantly shepherding invited guests, say from two to half a dozen, into a public dining place, taking command of the business of ordering, and matter-of-factly footing the bill in the presence of all when the meal was finished.

Frankly, I don't think the average person of any social experience today would care which way his host or hostess managed the restaurant party. Like you, he would have seen it done both ways, and he would be more intent on enjoying the occasion and in conveying his appreciation to his host (or hostess), than he would in making notes on his cuff concerning the under-structural mechanics of the situation. So far as I am concerned, this controversy between you and your friend may be adjudged a draw. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Semifitted Clothes 'Oomph' Girl's Choice

Hollywood, Calif., April 9.—If fashion doesn't have "Oomph" it is counted out in Hollywood, where the word is defined as "the present tense of It," and Ann Sheridan is its chief exponent under her recently acquired title of "Oomph Girl."

Ann's personal opinion is that semifitted lines are the ones with "Oomph." Knits and sheers are fabric firsts for day, satin and silk jersey for evening. She thinks the twentieth century tendency to cover shoulders has as much in its favor as the revived strapless mode. She prefers stripes and monotones to riotous prints and black, white and neutrals to shouting shades.

Folding Bed Makes Return As Small Chest

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

FOLDING beds are literally as old as Egypt . . . they're mentioned in most all early stories of furniture. So we needn't think we're being so modern when we get some trick number that vanishes when you say "abracadabra." And we've called attention before to that early chair-bed of England—from all I can gather it was a cross between the wing chair and the Morris chair.

Just the same we were impressed to death with a new bed-in-a-chest that turned up at the recent furniture market in Chicago. It is as trim as you please by day, hidden away in a small dignified chest, but at night, out comes a full length comfortable bed. Fine for unexpected guests in the small menage, or in a push a member of the family could use it all the time.

And Egypt never had the likes of the sofa-beds that are available today. Well tailored, with smart slender lines of period design, they open out easily into full sized comfortable beds. There are now love seats that open into beds, as well as chairs that stretch out to make amazingly comfortable beds.

The Gentler Sex

The Caucus

Mrs. Joyner—Well, since nobody else will get this thing started, I might as well say that a few of us thought we'd get together and—well, talk things over.

Mrs. McAddle—I thought we were going to draw up an election ticket.

Mrs. Joyner—Oh, no . . . well, not exactly that . . .

Mrs. Doodle—Who are we going to run for president?

Mrs. Yeaman—Why don't you take it, Mrs. Jay?

Mrs. Jay—I wouldn't THINK of having it. My husband would have a fit!

Mrs. Yeaman—I tell you who would make a nice little president—Mrs. Sprink. She would preside so graciously.

Mrs. Joyner—Mrs. Sprink's a lovely little woman, but—well, I just don't think she's presidential timber.

Mrs. Lightcap — Now, Mrs. Sprink's one of my best friends, but—well, don't you think she's a little extreme in her clothes?

Mrs. Doodle—What about Mrs. March? Now, she's plenty smart.

Mrs. Joyner—Well, the whole thing is about Mrs. March—now, please understand she's one of my best friends—but, well, a lot of people don't approve of the way Mrs. March dresses.

Mrs. McAddle—Say, have you seen that checked coat she's wearing?

Mrs. Jay—Have you seen that HAT?

Mrs. Doodle—Well, of course, Mrs. March isn't a woman who's particularly interested in dress. But after all, we aren't nominating for a fashion show.

Mrs. Joyner—Yes, but you have to consider the prestige of the club.

Mrs. McAddle—Yes, and there's the annual banquet and all the newspapers'll send photographers.

Mrs. Yeaman—Why don't you take it, Mrs. McAddle?

Mrs. McAddle—I wouldn't THINK of having it. Mr. McAddle would have a fit.

Mrs. Lightcap—Say, I tell you who'd be good—Mrs. Minch. She's such a sweet little mother.

Mrs. Doodle—Well, I doubt if Mrs. Minch could afford the clothes. You know, her husband's very odd.

Mrs. Nitter—Say, Mrs. Battle's never been president!

Mrs. Joyner—I'm a little afraid we couldn't elect Mrs. Battle.

Mrs. Jay—So am I. Now, Mrs. Battle's really one of my best friends, but—well, I really think she's a little too strong a character.

Mrs. Lightcap—Well, if you want someone who will preside graciously, you can't beat Mrs. Smiley.

Mrs. Joyner—Well, now, I'm very fond of Mrs. Smiley personally, but—well, I'm afraid she couldn't cope with certain elements in the club.

Mrs. Nitter—You know who I think we ought to elect? Mrs. Piney!

Mrs. Joyner and Mrs. Doodle—Mrs. Piney!

Mrs. Nitter—Yes! Look how hard she's worked. Remember all those lemons she squeezed for the punch at the open house?

Mrs. Joyner—Mrs. Piney's a sweet little woman, but——

Mrs. Nitter—Another thing. I think it would mean a lot to Mrs. Piney just now, when she's been having all that trouble with her husband——

Mrs. McAddle—Say, I didn't know about that!

Mrs. Lightcap—What's he been doing now?

Mrs. Joyner—Girls, I think we had better get on with this. Now I want to say that I'm extremely devoted to Mrs. Piney, but I just don't think she's the type for president.

Mrs. Yeaman—Well, it looks, Mrs. Jay, as if you'll have to take it.

Mrs. Jay—No, let Mrs. McAddle take it.

Mrs. McAddle—Mr. McAddle would have a fit. Of course, though, I . . . I could talk to him.

Mrs. Jay—We-ll, of course, I COULD talk to Mr. Jay.

Mrs. Doodle—Say, I've thought of somebody! Mrs. Doe!

Mrs. Joyner—I had forgotten all about her.

Chorus—So had I!

Mrs. Doodle—She's been in the club 15 years and never made an enemy.

Mrs. Lightcap—She always looks neat in her clothes, too!

Mrs. Nitter—She's lovely in evening dress.

Mrs. Yeaman—And she's always paid her dues.

Mrs. McAddle—Could she preside graciously?

Mrs. Doodle—We-ll, she looks very nice when she smiles.

Mrs. Lightcap—Well, after all, there's nothing against Mrs. Doe . . . And I don't really believe we could really do any better——

Mrs. Joyner—I believe Mrs. Doe would be all right—and then, of course, we could elect a very strong vice president.

49 D. A. R. Girl Pilgrims To See the City Today

Good Citizenship Honor Winners Becoming Finer Every Year, Welcomers Agree; Many Are Outstanding Debaters and Leaders in School

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Good Citizenship Pilgrims from every State in the Union gathered at the Blackstone Hotel yesterday to spend the week-end in Washington as guests of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, of Brookville, Ind., national chairman of the good citizenship pilgrim committee, welcomed and registered the girls as they arrived. Last night they rehearsed for presentation of their awards by the president general, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., and today they are ready for a strenuous program of sight-seeing and entertainment.

The pilgrims were selected for qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism, chosen by students and faculties of their own high schools as representatives in State competition and the girl considered outstanding among these, awarded the trip. Each is sponsored by her State D. A. R. chapter.

All Outstanding In Scholarship

All are outstanding in scholarship and many are members of high school honor societies. Most of them also are leaders in school organizations. Kitty Ruth Jackson, of Wichita Falls, Tex., for instance, is a champion debater—a bright-eyed, young person with curly red hair and dimples. On her arrival she found an immediate bond of interest with Betty Lou Balch, of Ogden, Utah, a rominent debater in her State. Lillian Brantley, of Shelbyville, Ky., is interested in dramatics.

One of the girls in this year's group—and they're a finer type every year. Miss Ann Twohy of the District and Mrs. George E. Harbert of Park Ridge, Ill., agreed as they assisted in welcoming them—had never been on a train before she started from Williston, Fla., for Washington. She is Teresa Phinney, active in the 4-H club, inschool organizeations, in her church and Sunday school and accomplished in cooking and sewing.

She had traveled in Florida by bus and motor car but felt like Alice in Wonderland when she boarded the train for Jacksonville, on the first lap of her journey. It was only 100 miles but she was the only person in her car—and the experience was a real adventure.

Iowa Girl Gifted Artist

Mary Ann Sanders, from Waterloo, La., is a gifted and practical young artist. Not only does she paint, but she also makes plaques for sale. At Christmas time she had more orders than she could handle. Yesterday she and Katherine Hanley, the District pilgrim, who is staying with the others at the hotel, accompanied the Iowa vice regent, Mrs. Clyde Prenton, on a trip to Annapolis.

Another accomplished girl is Jeannette Beausoleil, of Moosup, Center Village, Conn., who is president of the dramatic club, editor-in-chief of the school paper and cheer leader.

Pilgrims Are Entertained

Following dinner last night the Pilgrims visited the D. A. R. buildings and then were guests at a party given by the District Pilgrimage committee at the home of Mrs. Thomas H. Seay, national vice chairman. There they were received by Mrs. Robert.

This morning the Pilgrims will visit the Library of Congress and in the afternoon will be taken through the Smithsonian Institution. Later in the afternoon they will go on a sightseeing trip of the city, with stops at the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

Represeentative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, national vice chairman of the committee, will address them this evening and tell them about the legislative branch of the Government, preparing them for the visit to the House and Senate on Monday.

The good citizenship pilgrims are: Alabama, Jean Espy; Arizona, Gloria Chastain; Arkansas, Peggy Gregg; California, Mary Eleanor Griffin; Colorado, Frances Hess; Connecticut, Jeannette Beausoleil; Delaware, Jean Alexander; D. C., Katherine Hanley; Florida, Teresa Phinney; Georgia, Hazel Chafin; Idaho, Ruth E. Nelson; Illinois, Susie Faye Wright; Indiana, Florence Oltman; Iowa, Mary Ann Sanders; Kansas, Ruth Irene Pederson; Kentucky, Harriet Eaton; Louisiana, Frances Hollard; Maine, Amy Armstrong; Maryland, Marjorie Brock; Massachusetts, Olva M. Bromiley; Michigan, Anne Evarts; Minnesota, Marvel Eleanor Peterson.

Mississippi, Catherine Brown; Missouri, Betty Lynn Galbreath; Montana, Marie Maras; Nebraska, Erna Good; Nevada, Jean Werner; New Hampshire, Jeanne Shirley Tebo; New Jersey, Anne Pearce; New Mexico, Doris Mardis; New York, Virginia Stolz; North Carolina, Ann Wiley; North Dakota, Marjorie Poling; Ohio, Marilynn Mae Koons; Oklahoma, Marjorie Rainwater; Oregon, Rosemay Allen Schroeder; Pennsylvania, Florence M. Newman; Rhode Island, Alice Mary Baxter; South Carolina, Marguerite Phillips; South Dakota, Dorothy Rule; Tennessee, Lillian Brantley; Texas, Kitty Ruth Jackson; Utah, Betty Lou Balch; Vermont, Pauline Maude Sanborn; Virginia, Corinne Lockett Hurt; Washington, Verla Watkins; West Virginia, Ruth Lee Miller; Wisconsin, Lorraine Burke; Wyoming, Lucille Klein.

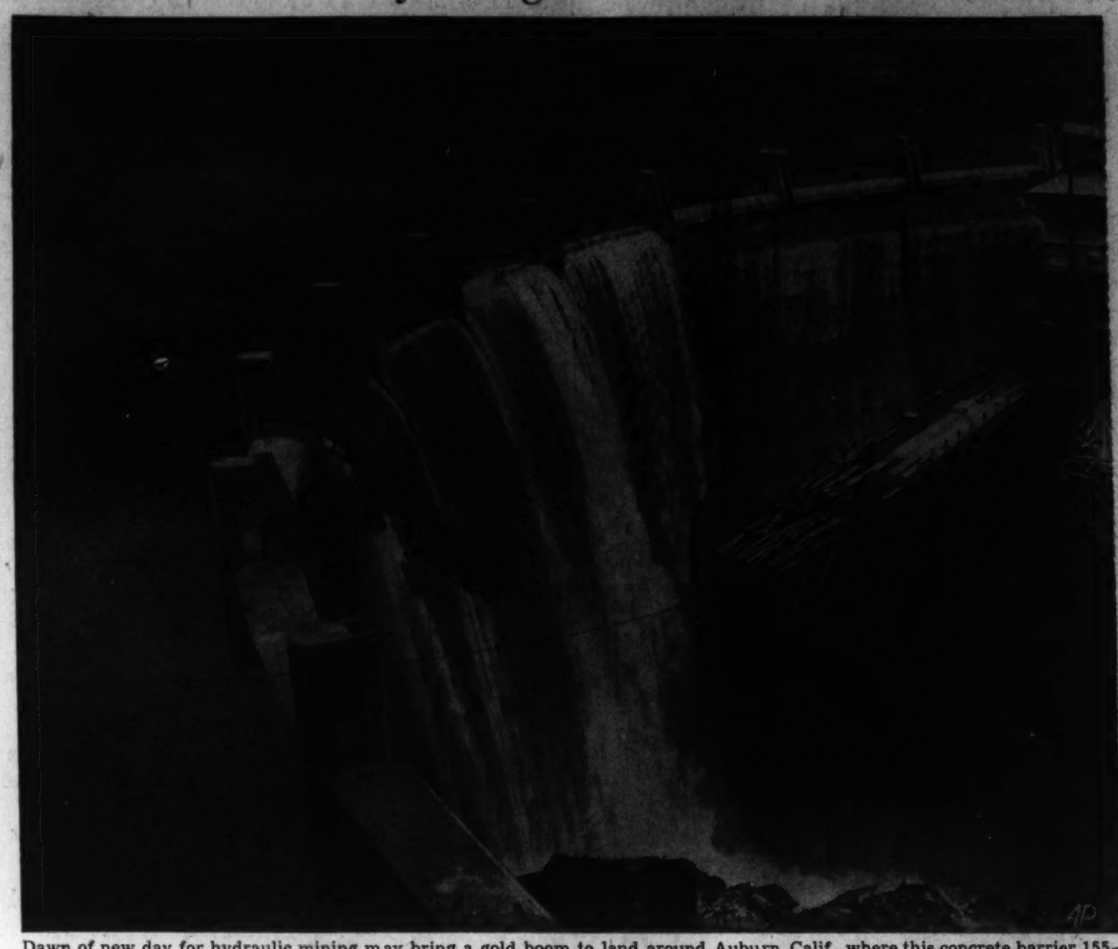
Concrete Wall May Bring New California Gold Rush



Dawn of new day for hydraulic mining may bring a gold boom to land around Auburn, Calif., where this concrete barrier 155-feet high crosses the American River, as the first of a series of debris dams being built under the direction of Army engineers. Before hydraulic mining was legislated out of existence in 1893 after years of strife between miners and farmers, it produced the bulk of the gold mined in California. The lake is intended as a settling basin for diggings unworked for years

Wilson-Webber Nuptials Held

Wearing a gown of handmade lace which had been worn by brides in her family, Miss Anne Isabel Webber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip R. Webber, of Pittsburgh, was married last evening to Thomas Winfield Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield A. Wilson, of Washington. The wedding took place at 8 o'clock at the Shanopin Country Club, in Pittsburgh, the Rev. J. C. Brinckerhoff officiating.

The bride's ensemble was topped off by a veil of lace, and she carried white tulips. She was given in marriage by her father. Miss Jane Wilson, of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Margaret Forsythe, Jane Hallet and Elizabeth Stout, of Pittsburgh, and Jane Herrick, of Boston. Carl Pfau, of Washington, was best man and the ushers were George Webber, brother of the bride; Lieut. Charles Heaton, William Hogg and Roger Herrick.

A reception at the Country Club followed the ceremony. The couple will make their home in the Buckingham Apartments, Arlington, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Sweetbriar and the King-Smith Studio School. Mr. Wilson is an alumnus of the University of Maryland and Georgetown University Law School. He is a member of the District of Columbia Bar Association and is president of the Delta Thea Phi Igeal fraternity's Alumni Association.

3,000 Linen Articles Donated To Sibley Hospital at Shower

Woman's Guild Gives Towels, Baby Dresses And Surgical Garments; Mrs. Mooers, President, Heads Receiving Line

Approximately 3,000 articles were donated to Sibley Memorial Hospital yesterday at the annual linen shower sponsored by the Woman's Guild at Rust Hall. The towels, baby dresses and surgical garments were arranged in piles on long tables placed the length of the wall on either side of chapel.

Mrs. Samuel Mooers, president of the guild, had receiving with her during the afternoon, Mr. Lewis H. Taylor, president of the hospital; Mrs. Helen Shoemaker, superintendent of nurses and members of the board, including Mrs. Dillard Groff, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, Mrs. Lewis Elmer and Mrs. Timothy Stanton.

The sewing chairman for the guild, Mrs. Roy I. Green, distributes in January the material for the garments which are sent to the linen shower each April. They are made by women of the various churches and yesterday were designated with the names of the groups which had gvien them. The women also keep the hospital linens in repair.

Flowers donated by local florists were sold at a table in charge of Mrs. Charles V. Dunmire; the cake table was under the direction of Mrs. John W. Hodgson, assisted by Mrs. Charles A. Hutchins, Mrs. Elwood B. Myers and Mrs. Spicer J. Dodson, and tours of the hospital were arranged by Mrs. R. Lee Spire.

There was music in the afternoon by the Hart Instrumental Trio and a brief program was given by the Junior Guild, following a party of its members in the new sewing room. Mrs. Hayward Brown was in charge of the Juniors.

In the evening, an organ recital was presented by three of the hospital nurses, Miss Cynthia Willard, Miss Elizabeth Spencer and Miss Mendelle Sachs. In addition, four playlets were presented by the Eckington Players under the direction of Miss Pauline Eaton Oak.

The Methodist Ministers' Wives Association was in charge of the tea in the afternoon, with Mrs. R. Heber Stone, president, as chairman. Pouring were Mrs. G. Ellis Williams, Mrs. Luther Neff, Mrs. John Fort, Mrs. John Edwards. Others assisting were Mrs. George Bennett, Mrs. Carol Coale, Mrs. E. Guan; Mrs. Daniel Ennis, Mrs. Albert Zimmerson and Mrs. Clarence Corcoran.

Senmei Muchaku.

Frances Wheater Becomes Bride of Adon W. Phillips

Upon their return from a Southern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Adon W. Phillips, whose marriage took place lats evening in Chevy Chase Baptist Church, will make their home in Silver Spring, Md. The bride was, before her marriage, Miss Frances Wheater, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Wheater, of Livingston street, Chevy Chase. Mr. Phillips is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adon D. Phillips. Following the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Edward O. Clark, a small reception for the wedding party was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The former Miss Wheater wore a gown of white marquisette over satin, fashioned along princess lines, with cowl neck and puffed sleeves, and terminating in a train. Her tulle veil was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls with orange blossoms at each side. She carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley and sweet peas, centered with white orchids.

Miss Elizabeth Anne W[illegible] who was maid of honor [f]or sister, wore turquoise bl[ue] over taffeta. The brides[maids] Miss Miriam Gumpert, Mi[ss] queline Beck, and the [misses] Ruth and Edith Wheater, [cous]ton, cousins of the bride, [were] attired in dresses similar to [that] of the maid of honor. Two were in peach; and two in hyacinth blue. All wore garlands of spring flowers in their hair and each carried an old-fashioned bouquet of spring flowers. Little Joan Birkett, in peach colored net, was flower girl.

William Shreve, of Falls Church, Va., was best man and John Lecraw, William Watkins, Benjamin Waldo, jr., and Henry Latterner were the ushers.

At the reception, Mrs. Wheater, mother of the bride, wore delft blue lace, while Mrs. Phillips, mother of the bridegroom, was in light blue lace and net.

The Hunt Country

Fi... Ma...

By Nina Carter Tabb

MIDDLEBURG IS SEETHING with activity today, as the hour approaches for the hunt races—the first of them—to be run this afternoon for the benefit of the Loudoun Hospital at Leesburg. The Glenwood course is clean-swept and beautiful with fresh, green brush jumps, substantial timber fences, green fields rolling toward the Blue Ridge Mountains and by the natural grandstand and boxes built upon rocks on the side of the hill. Chairs have been placed ready for the spectators. Beds of narcissus and daffodils between the stands, and the track adds just the right bit of golden yellow.

Paddock stalls are neat and ready for the snorting thoroughbreds that are being led there by anxious and hopeful grooms. Trainers are also on hand to see that these horses have every attention. So, rain or shine, this will be a great day of sport. The neighborhood is overflowing with visitors and there will be parties and entertaining for them over the week-end.

MR. AND MRS. Daniel C. Sands will give a large luncheon at Beaton at 12 o'clock for the officials, stewards and judges and out-of-town friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Langley will entertain a large crowd for luncheon at their home, Greenway. Christopher G reer also will give a luncheon at Old Welbourne, and others entertaining before the races are Miss Anne Gochnauer, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wilshire, and numbers of others.

AFTER THE RACES Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson will give a cocktail party and every house in the neighborhood will have friends dropping in. Tonight there will be dozens of dinner parties before the dances: one to be given by Mrs. John Hay Whitney at Llangollen near Upperville, a dinner dance at North Wales Club, Warrenton, and a subscription dance at Front Royal.

Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith will entertain with a large dinner in honor of her house guests McKinney will give a small dinner in honor of her house guest who include her mother-in-law, Mrs. Corliss Sullivan, of Cleveland; her father, Mr. Thomas J. Regan, of New York, and Mrs. Gregory McIntosh, of Chigan Falls, Ohio.

MR. AND MRS. ALVIN BAIRD have invited friends for another dinner party at Oak Hill, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frost are entertaining, and Miss Bettina Belmont has invited about 100 members of the younger set for a buffet dinner. In fact, everyone here is entertaining to take care of the many attractive people who have come for this important sporting event.

The horses are superb: there are six entries in the Middleburg Cup Steeplechase, the feature race of the day, about 4 miles over timber, with a purse of $1,000, also a piece of plate. Paul Mellon's Faction Fighter will probably be the favorite, but he will run against such good ones as the veteran Ostand, owned by Mrs. Frank M. Gould; Cog Bruyere, owner, John Strawbridge; Terry's Winner, Miss Therese Schey, Postman Home, also owned by Mrs. Gould, and Black Sweet, Turner Wiltshire's horse that won the point-to-point race at Middleburg two weeks ago.

FIRST RACE of the afternoon is the Wanquepin, a mile and a half over hurdles, to be called at 2 p. m. with 11 entries, including Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Tom's Boy and Paper Moon, Mrs. Reginald Sinclaire's Better Brook; Jack Carpenter's Crowlean, Remson William's Guatemala, Thomas T. Mott's Yammer, Mrs. Robert Gibbs, Censurer, North Hill's Farm's Moon Hunter, Mrs. John C. Clark's Itsaboy, Paul Mellon's Sea Ted, Mrs. Lewis A. Park's Royal Thomas.

Second race, The William Skinner Memorial—2½ miles over a brush course. Entries, Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stables, with Stars and Stripes and Rough Diamond, second, Thomas T. Mott's Persian Prince, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Talents Rare; Ewart Johnston's Seafarin Dan, R. V. N. Gambrill's Telemark, Alvin Untermyer's Wambaw, J. E. Ryan's Well-stepped.

FOURTH RACE—The Panther Skin Steeple Chase, 2 miles over a brush course, has the largest entry list of 22, including Mrs. J. E. Clark's Aylward; Mrs. Marion Dupont Scott's Kilmallock, Robert E. McConnell's Calculate, Helmdel Stables' Cantermoor, Robeley Stables' Rough Diamond II, aJck Carpenter's Crowlean, Mrs. Reginald's Sinclair's Swiftgold, Gordon F. Perry's Wilfred, Mrs. Robert Gibbs' Budget Boy, R. V. N. Gambrill's Tioga, Mrs. Manton B. Metcalf's By hTe Sword, W. B. Ruthfuf's Clovisse, Raymond Guests' Catalen Boy and Tappy Joe, Mrs. J. E. Clark's Little Cottage, J. J. Watts' Leslie Myer, Mrs. M. A. Taylor's Ruth Wrack, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Loro and Palm Stone, Mrs. Marion DuPont Scott's Sailor's Knot, T. T. Mott's Brummanner and Persian Prince.

THE FIFTH RACE—The Raymond Belmont Memorial—three miles across country over flag course. Entries—G. A. Laing's Burner Boy; Christopher's Greer's Monk's Lore; Jack Carpenter Crollean; Hubert Phills' Wrack Pike; Dr. L. N. Allen's Clifton's Fairy; Mrs. Eva Spillman's Music Mountain; Arthur I. Meiggs' Red Ned; Charles S. Cheston's Reconsidered; North Hill Farm's Moon Hunter; Turner Wiltshire's Black Sweet.

Sixth Race—The Covert—about a mile turf course. Entries, Anklet, owner Louie Leith; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Upper Berth; Mrs. Reginald Sinclair's Noction and Old Don; North Hill Farm's Rain Coat; Mrs. Turner Wilshire's Armenidas; Mrs. J. C. Clark's Itsaboy; Thomas T. Mott's Lativach and Paul Mellon's Dothair.

Mrs. Robert H. Fife, of New York City, representing the Garden Club of America, yesterday presented the coveted high award of that group, the bronze medal, to the Garden Club of Virginia Narcissus Test Gardens, conducted by Miss Martha Harris, of Aldie, at the eighth annual Narcissus Show, in Armory Hall, Alexandria.

The late Mrs. Floyd Harris started this work of test gardens for the State organization and the work has been continued by her daughter, Miss Harris.

Mrs. Harris was a member of the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club, and that club established as a memorial to her one of the most prized awards of the annual exhibit, the Eleanor Truax Harris Memorial Bowl, for the outstanding novelty of the show, Mrs. Louise S. Scott, of Alexandria, was the winner.

Mrs. R. J. Reid, of Chatham, won the Sweepstakes, the Mrs. Leslie Gray Trophy.

Other special awards were: The Garden Club of Virginia Cup, the Alexandria Garden Club; the Mrs. Thomas S. Wheelwright Cup, Rappahannock Garden Club; the Eleanor Truax Harris Cup, Mrs. J. Lee Pratt; the Presidents of Member Clubs Cup, Mrs. W. W. Gibbs; the Stoke Cup, Mrs. James Gillian; the Mrs. Amos Chilcott Cup, Mrs. R. J. Reid; the Mrs. Louis N. Dibrell Cup, Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, and the American Horticultural Society Silver Medal, B. Y. Morrison.

The show was visited yesterday by hundreds of enthusiasts from Virginia, District of Columbia and Maryland and many from distant States. One exhibit came by plane from Sandy, Oreg. The show today will be from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., and after that time all flowers not claimed by owners will be sold by the committee to help defray expenses of the show.

Latin American Concert Draws Capital Society

Function Commemorates First Meeting of Americas in 1890

Diplomats, officials and members of residential society last evening crowded the halls of the Pan American Union to attend the first of the spring season's Latin American concerts. The event was in commemoration of the first international meeting of the Americas April 14, 1890.

The United State Navy band, Natalia Garland de Cook, Peruvian coloratura soprano, and Bernardo Segall, Brazilian pianist, contributed music to the occasion, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull delivered a brief address. Flags of the 20 Latin Republics and the United States, banked on each side of the stage, formed the decorations.

Among those whom the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, greeted at the door were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, the latter gowned in blue satin; the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Martins, who was wearing a dusky purple dress; the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil, who wore a black crepe gown with long sleeves and a sable cape; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Minister of Guatemala and Mme. Recinos, who wore blue and silver brocade; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd, who was in electric blue satin with silver trim; the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, and the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron who was in black and gold lame.

Vladimir Hurban Among the Guests

Still others were Vladimir Hurban, of Czecho-Slovakia; the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis; the Minister of Uruguay, Jose Richling; the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith; and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, she in a red gown with matching wrap.

Others who made their way up the front steps of the Pan American Union beneath the bright blue and orange canopy were Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Representative Caroline O'Day, Senator and Mrs. William King, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison; and Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. McNinch and their daughters, the Misses Ariel and Huldah McNinch.

Admiral Leahy Also Attends

Still more were Admiral and Mrs. William Leahy, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Carl McFarland, and their house guests, Lieut. and Mrs. Hamilton A. Twitchell, Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, Dr. and Mme. Basil Toutorsky, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mr. and Mrs. William Culbertson.

Mme. de Cook was gowned in bouffant white taffeta and wore a garland of gardenias across the bodice of her dress. She also wore gardenias in her hair.

U. M. W. Pickets Cause Clinchfield Mines to Close

Clinchco, Va., April 14 (AP).—A small army of pickets, recruited from United Mine Workers in several States and occupying a temporary camp, discussed plans today for continuation of a campaign to organize workmen of the Clinchfield Coal Corporation.

Pickets from West Virginia, Kentucky and other States, estimated at from 1,000 to 1,200 men, opened the organization campaign after the Clinchfield Corporation, the only large group in this bituminous field not affiliated with them, continued operations when the United Mine Workers quit work April 1, pending negotiations on a new contract.

The Clinchfield mines were shut down today, however, on orders of Lee Long, vice president of the corporation, because of the tense situation, and the State police force was increased to 40.

Robert Hoard, a colored Clinchfield employe, and Roy Willis, a white union man, were fined $5 and given 60 days in jail on charges of participation in a fight. Willis escaped from custody after the hearing.

1 Killed, 2 Hurt As Auto Crashes Into Va. Culvert

Charlottesville, Va., April 14.—(AP)—James Kemper Collins, 30, of this city was killed and two of his companions hurt when the automobile in which they were riding is reported to have crashed into a culvert last night about 12 miles east of here on route 22. Ira Fisher, 19, and John R. Cox, 23, both of this city, were brought to University Hospital here.

Cox received brain concussion and multiple cuts and bruises and Fisher sustained a dislocated hip and face cuts, an attending physician said. Two other passengers in the car, Frank Harlow and Clay Purvis, escaped with minor injuries.

In another accident on route 29 between the Garth and Barracks roads, Roy Gentry, 33, this city, received a possible skull fracture brain concussion and a broken jaw. A companion, Miss Ruth Craddock, was treated at University Hospital for minor cuts and bruises.

Declamation Winners

Crisfield, Md., April 14 (AP).—Dorothy Powell, of Washington High School, Princess Anne, and Broadus Coons, of Marion High School, were first-place winners today in the seventeenth annual Somerset County high school declamation contest.

Blossom Queen To Be Feted at Cave Pageant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Endless Caverns, Va., April 14.—In the far depths of Endless Caverns, on April 23, Miss Genevieve Garner, who has been chosen this year to rule over the annual Apple Blossom Festival as "Queen Shenandoah XVI," will be welcomed in a picturesque pageant by "The Mountain King."

Frank M. Wissler, of Strathmore Orchards, will take the part of "The Mountain King." In fantastic costume, seated upon a stalagmite throne surrounded by gnomes and pages, he will welcome "Queen Shenandoah XVI" to his realm beneath the earth. It is an annual custom for the Queen to pay an official visit to the Shenandoah Valley at Endless Caverns, where the subterranean ceremonies are followed by a reception at the home of Major and Mrs. E. M. Brown.

D. C. Social Experts Seek Co-ordination

Single Recreation Council Is Urged For the Entire Metropolitan Area

The tremendous volume of Government and public welfare work increases the necessity of developing higher standards in private social service, Allen T. Burns, executive vice president of the Community Chests and councils, told the Washington-suburban conference on welfare work last night in the Camber of Commerce Auditorium.

The conference, which opened Thursday, is the first ever called to consider welfare problems of all metropolitan Washington.

The outstanding public welfare work is found in areas where the caliber of previously existing private charity was at its highest levels, Burns said, and was "translated" into the program of "our bigger brother and partner, the public welfare service."

Co-ordination Is Problem

One of the biggest problems facing social workers is to co-ordinate the specialized fields into which welfare service has spread, Burns added. Too often, he said, a single agency deals with only one phase of a troubled family's problem.

Earlier in the day, Mrs. Eugene Myer had led a round table discussion on recreation problems. She urged co-ordination of private and public recreation agencies as the first step toward a planned program which would bring county groups into the metropolitan area.

Following Mrs. Meyer's summary of the round table discussion, a motion was adopted inviting adjacent county groups to join a recreational council in Washington and thus unite local and suburban activities in a single metropolitan unit.

Lewis R. Barrett, District co-ordinator of recreation, urged general co-operation in the growing problem of dealing with juvenile delinquency.

In round table discussions of the family welfare problem, Woodson P. Houghton explained reasons for family "breakdown."

Factors in Family "Breakdwon"

He stressed the necessity of public education on this phase of family life, and said it was a job for social workers. He listed three factors which enter the family "breakdown" picture.

Changes in the economic situation of a family.

Changes in the home because of too many outside interests—such as motion pictures, dances, etc.

Frequent clashes between generations represented in a family because of conflicting views.

William Savin, director of the Family Service Association, said one of the most important problems facing social service workers is that of dependency on the part of those in distress. He urged workers to stress upon relief clients the necessity for returning to self-support after a helping hand is given.

"Every person," said Savin, "has a desire to be dependent when circumstances make life difficult. Indiscriminate giving of relief without the services of a skilled case worker tends to make the recipient chronically dependent."

Mrs. Ruth Bolton, of the Montgomery County Social Service League, urged more preventative work against family disintegration. Far better and more lasting help can be given a family when difficulties first start rather than waiting until the family is on the verge of a breakdown.

Hospital Lack Cited

A number of speakers described health and welfare conditions in the various counties around aWshington. Points made included:

Because there are no county or general hospitals in Prince Georges County, contagious and communicable disease cases must be taken either to Baltimore or Washington.

There is a waiting list of about 600 colored tuberculosis cases in Montgomery County, and clinics must be expanded to care for vision, hard of hearing and cardiac cases.

The building boom in Arlington County has greatly increased the health and welfare problem, because of a rising population.

Crop Fears Stirred by Heavy Frost

Damage Estimates Vary; Pea Beds, Tomatoes Reported Killed on Md. Shore

By the Associated Press.

Winter's swift return, with tumbling temperatures and topcoat-whipping winds, furrowed farmers' brows with worry this week over fears of widespread damage to garden crops and fruits.

In practically every section of Maryland and Virginia the mercury has dropped well below freezing the past few days, wrapping early buds and tender leaves in a lethal layer of frost. In a few sectors the ill wind blew some good by preventing the cold air from settling and chilling the buds. In other spots, especially on the eastern shore of Maryland, the wind whipped sand through young pea beds and ripped away most of the leaves.

The heaviest damage reported was in the Princess Anne sector on the eastern shore, where 27-degree temperature killed practically all the early tomato plants and damaged early blossoms of strawberries and fruit. Extensive fruit damage was reported in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

Only the tomato plants which had been protected by paper caps were saved in the Maryland region, where truck gardening is a major industry. Young string beans were killed and apple, pear and cherry blossoms were heavily damaged.

Growers said death of the strawberry blossoms will delay the first shipments by at least a week, as other blossoms must form.

The mercury sank to 30 at Salisbury, but a high wind apparently protected peach blossoms from damage. Green beans and strawberry plants were not far enough advanced to be damaged seriously.

County Agent Stanley Day, of Anne Arundel County, said damage to fruit could not be determined for some time; blackened blooms were seen in some spots, but dry weather and a lack of surface moisture protected many sections of the county.

Frederick County growers credited high winds with saving them from serious damage, and orchards in the Hagerstown vicinity generally escaped injury.

Junior Board Leaders Open Parley Today

Awards to Be Made At 2-Day Conference In Alexandria

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—Awards for outstanding work will be made here tomorrow when the leaders of the Junior Chamber of Commerce movement in the Middle Atlantic States open a two-day conference.

Representatives of more than 25 organizations in five States and the Board of Commerce of Washington, District of Columbia are expected to attend the sessions which will be held in the George Mason Hotel under the auspices of the Junior A. Z. Foster Wood, general chairman, declared today that more than 100 delegates from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and the District of Columbia will participate.

The awards will be based on civic betterment, group attendance and extension of the national movement. A special area prize will be made by Mark Matthews, national vice president, who will deliver the keynote address at the luncheon opening the session tomorrow.

Armistead Boothe, city attorney, will welcome the visitors on behalf of the City of Alexandria. Wives of delegates will tour Alexandria's historic homes Saturday afternoon following a ladies' luncheon, and will attend the dinner dance to be held Saturday night.

Representatives of 12 Virginia Junior Chambers will meet during the conference to form a State organization, the first in this area. A projected organization in Alexandria is expected to bring the total to 13 after the conference.

Presidents of Junior Chambers of Commerce invited to the conference include:

VIRGINIA—Boykins, Lewis, Knight, jr.; Clark County, Henry Post Mitchell, of Boyce; Charlottesville, S. L. Williamson; Danville, S. T. WEST VIRGINIA—Martinsburg, Preston Hopper; Parkersburg, J. O. Hoblitzell, jr.

PENNSYLVANIA—Lancaster, J. Richard Bauman; Philadelphia, Ward M. French; Pittsburgh, Joseph G. Smith; Sharon, D. A. McGarry; Wilkes-Barre, Robert A. Everman.

Other cities invited to be represented are Baltimore, Md., and Berkeley Springs, W. Va. (unaffiliated), Fredericksburg and Front Royal, Va., and Charles Town, W. Va., where chambers are being formed.

Regional Odd Fellows to Open Session Today in Hagerstown

Vanguard of 5,000 Delegates Arrives to Help Local Lodge Celebrate 100th Year; National I. O. O. F. Leaders to Attend

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, April 14.—The vanguard of the 5,000 or more members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows began arriving this evening for the regional meeting of Blue Ridge Odd Fellows here tomorrow. Incidentally the host lodge, Potomac Lodge No. 31 of Hagerstown, is also celebrating the 100th anniversary of its founding.

The local lodge was instituted April 16, 1839 and its charter contained the signature of Thomas Wildey, founder of the order in America. The lodge here is the largest subordinate body under the Grand Lodge of Maryland.

The sessions tomorrow are being held in three buildings, the luncheon in honor of Grand Sire Burton A. Gaskill, of Atlantic City, N. J., head of all Odd Fellows lodges in the United States and other countries, will be at Hotel Alexander at noon, following a Grand Sire's conference in the Woodmen of the World Building at 10 a. m. The Rebekah Lodge, women's organization of the order, will also meet in the Woodmen's building at 2 p. m. with the degree work in charge of Dorcas Lodge No. 4, of Washington.

The initiatory degree in the afternoon at 2 o'clock, will be at the State Armory and will be in charge of Warren Lodge of Baltimore.

The parade at 4 o'clock, will have Keiffer Bower, of Potomac Lodge as grand marshal and will include a contingent of the Girls Clubs, followed by the Patriarch Militant, uniformed section of the Odd Fellows, The Ladies Auxiliary and lodges from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and District of Columbia will follow in the order named.

A banquet at 6 p. m. will be held at Franklin Court and at the Masonic Temple. Reservations have been made for 1,600 persons. Following this a mass meeting will be held at the State Armory followed by a grand ball.

A. Frank Miller, of Mount Airy, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, and these other officers of the Maryland lodge, will attend: Leonard E. Mason, Baltimore, deputy grand master; A. H. Wilson, Aberdeen, grand warden; William A. Jones, Baltimore, grand secretary, and W. H. Hofstetter, jr., Baltimore, grand treasurer, and Alfred F. Lee, grand patriarch, and other officers of the Grand Encampment of Maryland.

Mrs. Fern Orsburn, president of the Rebekah Assembly of Maryland, will preside at meetings of the women's division.

Lauran Funk, noble grand of the Potomac Lodge, is host to the meeting.

Martha Barthlow is noble grand of Golden Rule Rebekah Lodge; Leth Lefever is noble grand of Mary Young Rebekah Lodge, and Laru Kitzmiller is president of the Themar Theta Rho Girls Club, all affiliated organizations of the Odd Fellows order here.

Alexandria Welcomes Tour Visitors Today

Seventeen Homes, Five Museums and Two Gardens Open

Alexandria, the "home town" of 30 officers of the Revolution, will be thronged today with visitors taking advantage of the tour of old houses sponsored by the Alexandria Association. Five museums, two gardens and 17 homes will be open. Three of the houses were homes of Revolutionary officers, and the museums, the Masonic Lodge, the Carlyle House, the Alexandria Academy, the Leadbeater drug store and Gadsby's Tavern are replete with relics of the early days of the city.

A quaint old coach, with costumed riders, will be driven through the streets, with outriders on prancing steeds, to call attention to the tour, and the old Friendship Fire Engine, belonging to the company of which George Washington was a member, will be on display at Gadsby's Tavern. Sidney J. Hammersley, who has been a member of the old fire company for more than fifty years, and who succeeded to his father's membership, will be in charge of the engine. He will wear the original uniform, also the hat that was worn by Washington when he was chief of the company.

The Sabbath Glee Club of Richmond will sing Negro spirituels, during tea from 4 to 6 o'clock, in Gadsby's Tavern.

Members of the local Children of the Revolution chapters and pupils from St. Agnes Episcopal School will be the guests of the Alexandria Association in making the tour. They will wear the costumes of colonial days.

The tour starts at 11 a. m. and ends at 5 p. m.

Staggering Jug Bridge To Be Fixed

Frederick, Md., April 14.—(AP).—The State threw a verbal support under staggering Jug Bridge today and said the historic span across the Monocacy River would not be replaced with a modern-day structure.

For 131 years the picturesque bridge has served its purpose well, but now the five stone arches are in need of repair and it had been rumored here the bridge was to be abandoned.

Jug Bridge reputedly was named for a demijohn of whisky, placed in a jug-shaped marker at one end of the span when it was built in 1808.

Walter C. Hopkins, bridge engineer for the State roads commission, said the roads officials had advised him of no plan to abandon the bridge in order to eliminate a curve at its eastern approach.

The five arches have "staggered"—been pressed out of shape by the heavy traffic—but a daily check is being made and the span is serviceable, said Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer for the commission.

Emergency repairs may be necessary if the "stagger" much further, he said. The commission plans to make major repairs next October when funds for the next fiscal year become available.

Power Rate Too High, Says Mrs. Ramsay

Urges Rival Lines To Bring Price Down In Arlington County

The proposed county-owned power plant was discussed last night by Mrs. Marion Ramsay, of the Arlington County Civic Federation, who spoke before the Woodlawn Village Citizens Association at Mount Olivet Methodist Church in Glebe road.

She said she wasn't sure whether or not the plan would prove a good venture for the county, but charged that the county residents couldn't get consideration for lower rates from the Virginia Public Service Co., which now serves the major portion of the county and whose rates, she said, are "entirely too high."

Mrs. Ramsay said a survey made two years ago to check the feasibility of a municipally-owned power plant was based on rates of the Braddock Light and Power Co., which services part of the county, and whose rates, she said, were lower. Thus, she maintained rates of the municipal plant would be lower than those of the Virginia Public Service.

Legal Loophole Noted in Md. Bill Boosting Beer Tax

Frederick, Md., April 14 (AP).—Frederick County beer dealers pounced today upon what they termed a legal loophole in the new license bill which may allow them to escape payment of the $100 annual license fee.

The bill, which doubled the $50 license fee for persons selling beer by the bottle, carried no repeal of the present law which grants a combined beer and light wine license for $60, local dealers were informed.

If the "loophole" is proved effective, it undoubtedly will be invoked on a wide scale and reduce materially the revenue from the levy.

Delegate Charles S. Houck, jr., author of the bill, said no amendment repealing the $60 wine-and-beer license was added to the measure in the House, and State Senator John B. Funk said such an amendment was not voted by the upper House.

The bill is awaiting Gov. O'Conor's signature.

GUSTAVUUS P. LOHR

Gustavus P. Lohr observed his eighty-second birthday yesterday doing what he's been doing for the last 52 years—working at his desk in the offices of Johnson & Wimsatt, lumber dealers.

Mr. Lohr, who is the father of Lenox R. Lohr, president of National Broadcasting Company, comes within a few strokes of shooting his age. His score is in the high 80's or low 90's. He doesn't play 18 holes very often, however, because his doctor advises against going more than 9.

He says he's kept on warking, 12 years as a printer and 52 with his present firm, because otherwise "I'd get into mischief." Besides his golf and his poker, there are winter vacations in Florida and summer vacations in Tarrytown, N. Y., as his son's guest.

"But when I work I like to work," he says. "Trouble is, the company doesn't give me enough of it."

He says he's kept on working, 12 years as a printer and 52 with his

Mr. Lohr is a native-born Washingtonian and has lived in only two houses, the one near Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast in which he was born, and his present residence, only a few blocks distant, at 759 Eleventh street southeast. His favorite playmate when he was a youngster was another southeast-born lad, a first cousin, who became quite famous in later years. He was John Philip Sousa.

April 14 means more to this industrious octogenarian as the date of Abraham Lincoln's assassination than as his own birthday anniversary. He remembers distinctly the excitement and grief which prevailed in the Capital on that night in 1865 and on the following day.

"Booth, according to accounts, must have ridden past my house as he made his escape because he fled down Pennsylvania avenue," says Lohr. "I was home that night, too."

Deanna Durbin At Her Best In Fifth Film

'Three Smart Girls' Sequel Charms Crowds At RKO-Keith's

"THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP." Universal picturization of an original screen play by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson, starring Deanna Durbin, with Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Nella Walker, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan, Ernest Cossart and Felix Bressart. Lyrics and special adaptations by Charles Henderson. Musical director, Charles Previn. Directed by Henry Koster. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Perhaps it is because "Someone to Care for Me," that hummable song of the first "Three Smart Girls," is played as background music for a scene in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," that we think Deanna Durbin's newest film is her finest since that memorable surprise of two years ago. It opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's to a full and delighted house.

It is not so much that we have not enjoyed her other pictures, but we have always felt that they have not had the naive sincerity her first film boasted. "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," despite the pardonable lushness of the star's surroundings, presents a more charming Deanna than ever. And that song brings back memories of that earlier excellent film.

Again she is Penny Craig, sister of flashing Joan and shy Kay. Daddy Judson Craig has gotten over his infatuation for a smooth blonde, with a talkative mother, and is now reunited with his serene, silver-haired wife. Joan, however, has copped Kay's White Knight and has announced her engagement to him. Faithful butler Binns secretly prescribes a bait, "tall, dark and handsome," to attract the glamorous Joan away from Kay's rightful beau.

Deanna a Comedienne

While Deanna does sing, she also flips off some delightful comedy scenes. Spying on her unhappy, diary-burning sister, she flies through a facing door and plumps into a bed before the disbelieving eyes of the returning sister. She measures the possibilities of any young man who happens to be tall, dark and handsome, with an eye to throwing him to her shy sister. She carries on a hopeful conversation with a flutist while they share honors in an orchestra rehearsal. She quickly loses interest in one of Daddy's Versailles fountains.

The other people in the cast are on the pleasant side, too. Besides Charles Winninger, as the most absent-minded father anyone ever had, there is a neat comedian in Robert Cummings, as the young man whom Deanna picks up at her music school to interest her sister. He is slightly dazed by his sudden appearance in the three sisters' palatial home and shows it delightfully. Ernest Cossart is again the helpful butler, who was such an aid to the plotting sisters of the earlier film. This time he is Deanna's particular guardian angel.

Nan Grey is the blonde and fragile Joan and Helen Parrish takes Barbara Read's old role as Kay. Nella Walker is again Mrs. Caig and William Lundigan is the fought-over Richard.

Previn Plays a Part

The man who has directed the music for all of the Durbin films appears for some brief moments in this one as an orchestra conductor of the music school. Charles Previn is the name title-followers have known and his appearance adds a touch of further freshness.

Just when "Three Smart Girls" was first appearing on the nation's screens, Japan began the war on China, which it has yet to declare. The new "March of Time," supporting the Durbin film, discusses the Chino-Japanese question with clippings from newsreels and a boost for China. Walt Disney has a fresh Silly Symphony in "The Ugly Duckling," a whimsy not so side-splitting as many, but far more appealing.

If the film and its excellent supporting program remain at RKO-Keith's as long as they deserve, the "Three Smart Girls" will become matronly and gray.

RICHARD L. COE.

Columbia

"Sergeant Madden" combines all the ingredients of the old Wallace Beery melodramas and yet manages to be almost convincingly tender teardrop material. Beery is the cop on the beat, the good-hearted Irishman who goes around adopting babies and dispensing sunshine. Josef von Sternberg, in strange directorial combination with the famed Beery proclivities for mugging, manages to squeeze in some profiles-against-the-skyline which give it a tonal quality lifting it out of the class "B" group.

Beery has a son, Alan Curtis, who has a killer's taste for blood, who uses the police force to further his own ambitions, winds up behind the eightball of police sirens and one way tickets to Sing-Sing. Tom Brown, adopted son, has little to do but be sweet solace for the Irish girl who was found in a paper box, who naturally is drawn to the thin-lipped glamour of Curtis, who is a dug, but handsome, withal. You may remember him from the time he broke Joan Crawford's heart spang in two and Spencer Tracy had to mend the pieces.

Tears and sirens and narrow escapes and gangsters and such all make Sergt. Madden's life a never-dull one, and chances are you will like it, even for Junior, for its "crime-does-not-pay" lesson is laid down in stern undeviating lines.

Lew Lehr has one of his Drizzle-Puss Parade features, concerned with wrestling in all its forms, having clips of the sports under all conditions from mud to battles royal, which makes murder appear downright sissified.

A Pictorial series has views of the Coast Guard boys receiving training at the New London, Conn., Academy, fashion do's and don't's and some remarkable camera shots of the night life of some interesting animals.

King Zog may be caught in the newsreel, along with other pertinent features.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Dave Apollon's 'Varieties' Revue 'Steals the Show' at Loew's Capitol

Every Act a Hit; Crawford and Stewart Costar on Screen In 'Ice Follies'

"THE ICE FOLLIES OF 1939." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Leonard Praskins, adapted to the screen by Mr. Praskins, Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf, co-starring Joan Crawford and James Stewart, with Lew Ayres, Lewis S. Stone, Lionel Stander, Charles D. Brown and the International Ice Follies Company, including Bess Ehrhardt, Roy and Eddie Shipstad and Oscar Johnson. Directed by Reinhold Schunzel. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

In view of Sonja Henie's priority in the field of comedy-romance on ice, it must be said that Dave Apollon's "Varieties of 1939" revue, on the stage, constitutes a more potent item of entertainment at Loew's Capitol Theater this week than Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers' screen production of "The Ice Follies of 1939." With Joan Crawford and James Stewart co-starred in the picture, this may be a modified form of heresy, but that is the way the afternoon's pastiming added up to these eyes and ears yesterday.

BELL

It is quite a show that Mr. Apollon has brought to Washington for the current week on F street. His revue is packed tight with talent—his own being by no means the least—and there is a band on the stage that will practically knock your ears off! This impressive group of instrumentalists represents a neat welding of the Capitol's regular pit orchestra and Apollon's Chez Paris Orchestra into an imposing unit that has been skillfully balanced in the matter of instrumentation. For once, there are enough strings to counterbalance the brasses and the effect is what anyone might reasonably expect from some 40 or more top musicians working at their best. It more or less brought back the days when the Capitol boasted a 50-piece orchestra of its own, under the gold-plated aegis of Meyer Davis.

Many Topline Acts

But the band was only the background of a revue that presented many highly gifted performers. The Six Honeys, there men and three girls, ostensibly brothers and sisters, open the proceedings with acrobatic dancing and gymnastic feats that are tops in their class. Apollon, of course, acts as master of ceremonies for the whole thing and introduces some of his distinguished mandolinning and Russian dancing—the fellow can whirl more without getting dizzy than anyone who comes to mind—and during the course of his activities introduces Tommy Trent, with his Punch and Judy show; Mildred Law, a tap dancer of the first rank; Henry Morton, "Dave's brother, Ivan," an inimitable comedian; Melissa Mason, the amazingly clever eccentric dancer; the Three Oxford Boys, whose orchestral impressions are in a class by themselves—especially since it is all vocal, save for one guitar—and Ruth Petty, that ebullient, young, miniature May West, who could raise the roof with her voice if she cared to, but is content merely to raise the customers right out of their chairs!

All of this genial business consumes a little more than an hour, but it is an hour of superlative diversion.

"The Ice Follies of 1939" is a slight recession on Joan Crawford's part from the excellence of her work in "The Shining Hour." The fault is not so much Miss Crawford's as it is the film's. Her work here probably would be just as good as formerly, if there were any appreciable amount of work imposed upon her known and radiant talents.

Strong Cast, Weak Plot

This is the familiar tale of the ice skaters—and Miss Crawford and James Stewart, her costar, do precious little skating—who can't quite make a go of it. So Mary McKay accepts a motion picture contract and doesn't do so badly. Larry Hall finally puts over an "Ice Follies" that clicks at the box-office. He and Mary having been married on a shoestring, her boss makes Larry a film director and there you are. Pretty feeble stuff for such ample talents as are engaged in it.

Lew Ayres, Lewis S. Stone and Lionel Stander are the foremost members of the supporting cast that makes a valiant effort to breathe life into a comparatively lifeless story.

But the real skating scenes—those in which Miss Crawford and Mr. Stewart do not appear—are decidedly something else again. The most pretentious of them are executed in Technicolor and enlist the agile services of Bess Ehrhardt, Roy and Eddie Shipstad, Oscar Johnson and the full roster of principals and gliding chorus of the International Ice Follies. This is a spectacle on a parity with the "Alice in Wonderland" sequence in Miss Henie's last picture.

Pol. Com. Valentine: Judge Irving Lehman of the Court of Appeals has granted Arthur Chalmers, the mounted policeman, permission to appeal his conviction in the Harlem Speedway murder case.

EQUITY: The star of the next show at Leon & Eddie's will be a Cow! . . . Jimmy Durante: Your manager and former partner, Lou Clayton, is in the hospital for the fifth time since he tried to beautify his nose. Vice President Garner: Sid Solomon, who owned the Central Park Casino, is one of Jim Farley's best friends . . . Solomon went to Farley, and said: "A lot of people keep asking me about your being a candidate for President. What'll I tell them? Shall I deny it?" . . . "No, no," Farley assured him. "You go right ahead and tell them it's all right. It's true."

BONWIT TELLER: Dali, the surrealist artist who jumped through your window when his display was altered, is preparing a Marine Surrealist show for the World's Fair. He'll have nude mermaids—with rubber fins covering their legs—swimming in a tank. The surrealistic effect will consist of three legs projecting from each fin . . . Will Hays: Danielle Darrieux has settled her differences with Universal Films. Her next movie for them will be "Rio" . . . Mayor LaGuardia: The bituminous coal operators looked worried, after the Commodore conference between John L. Lewis, Tom Kennedy and their trouble-shooting attorney, Morris L. Ernst . . . N. Y. Med. Assn.: A doctor who never performed an illegal operation will be indicted in the Abortion Racket. He's an official.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT: After the meeting at which Ickes made his attack against the columnists, he invited the guests to ask questions . . . "You've named and attacked a lot of columnists," someone asked. "What do you think of Mrs. Roosevelt?" . . . "Oh, well," Ickes replied. "That's all in the family."

J. P. MORGAN: This week a visitor at your Morgan Library was shown through the vaults, where he was invited to view some original Zola letters. The guide was surprised when he showed no interest. That's because he's seen so many and has a few himself. He's William Dieterle, who directed the Paul Muni picture, "Zola" . . . Spec. Pros. Amen: As far as your budget finances are concerned, the Mayor will put you on a month-to-month basis. In that way he'll be able to bring pressure . . . Dramatists' Guild: The G-men are seeking the producer of a successful British show which ran here a few years ago. He's wanted for forgery and car-stealing . . . Laurette Taylor: Next week your current hit, the revival of "Outward Bound," will have had a longer run than did the original Broadway production.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 14.—Here in Hollywood we get so darned used to this build-'em-up-today, tear-'em-down-tomorrow technique, that it's all part of the day's work to us. Not so Jim Preston, technical advisor on "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." Caught him yesterday meandering dejectedly all over the place, protesting something should be done about it! "These sets are so beautiful," he said. "It's awful to tear them down. I don't think I can bear it when the Senate goes."

HOPPER

Guess Mr. Roosevelt feels kind of that way, too, these days. Did you know that a former President can't even keep a little knick-knack like his favorite chair, or a chandelier when he quits the White House? But I'd be willing to bet that Preston could wangle a Senator's seat out of Capra if he really wanted to.

Capra told me he'd just bought a ranch—lemons! "You know some day, I may be glad to be able to sell one," he smiled. Can't kid me that way, Frank—you're one man I just can't imagine with a lemon on your hands—even the real thing!

Ran onto Mickey Neilan, who used to be our top director and found out he's living in Colleen Moore's house in Bel Air, where he'll stay while he finishes work on a book he's writing. Colleen never forgets a friend and is now able to repay Mickey for all the kindnesses he once showed her. Hope he gets a break. I hear his story is a wow!

Which reminds me of another one, though you'll probably never read it, 'cause it's one of those unprintables! It's Ben Hecht's latest, "Prairie to Producer," and is the most terrific thing ever written about producers. Gosh, that boy takes changes—things like that have a peculiar way of boomeranging! And when they hit, they slap hard!

Lewis Milestone was directing Roland Young for a scene in Paramount's "Heaven on a Shoestring" and said, "You know how drunks throw their heads back suddenly?" "I wouldn't know," said Roland, absolutely straight faced!

By the way, have you noticed the run on "heaven" in the movie industry? Paramount just previewed "Back Door to Heaven," and started "Heaven on a Shoestring," Universal has "East Side of Heaven" and Warner's "All This and Heaven Too." Good heavens!

Distaff Fliers Have Field Day On Met. Screen

'Women in Wind' Stars Kay Francis; Short Reels Score

"WOMEN IN THE WIND." Warner Brothers picturization of a novel by Francis Walton, adapted to the screen by Lee Katz and Albert DeMond, featuring Kay Francis, William Gargan and Victor Jory, with Maxie Rosenbloom, Eddie Foy, Jr., Sheila Bromley, Eve Arden, Charles Anthony Hughes, Franklin Burby, John Dilson, Spencer Charters, Vera Lewis, William Gould, Gordon Hart, Ila Rhodes and Rosella Towne. Directed by John Farrow. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

In "Women in the Wind," we have the movie version of the private lives of the queens of the skyways—those screwy lassies who risk their more or less lovely necks in cross-country air races.

And a vari-colored bunch they are—these lady airplane jockeys. There's Kay Francis who heads right into a thunderstorm, but to pay her brother's doctor bills. There's Sheila Bromley, who looks like a bit of Dresden china, but is a whiz at double-crossing either in the stratosphere or on the ground. There's Eve Arden, a sporty blonde screwball, who, when hauled out of a crashed and flaming plane, waves her scorched paw and says, "They can't crack me up. I've been married four times!"

Actual news happenings have been adeptly twisted and combined to form the story of "Women in the Wind." The world-famous pilot on a record-making flight suddenly finds the wind taken out of his sails by a freak (Corrigan) flight that leaves the public dizzy with its dare-devilry, in stitches of mirth at its essential nuttiness. The big ace, played by William Gargan, finds himself shunted right out of the spotlight to a spectator's position in the wings. All newspaper readers will remember this actual happening.

"Support" Love Interest

The femmes of the air lanes and their cross-country derby are angled across this essential plot both as love and melodramatic interest. Kay Francis' brother has taught her how to fly, but he's been crippled in a crack-up, needs the most expensive surgical treatment. So she sets out deliberately to out-siren all the sirens that surround flier Gargan, and makes a very efficient job of it. The big idea is for her to get Gargan's plane for her competition in the girls' race, meaning a head start for the $15,000 prize.

But here is where love rears its serpent head. Meaning that William G. and Kay F. develop a tremendous crush on each other. And Sheila Bromley, William's ex-wife, decides to do a turnabout on that Mexican divorce, grab his prize plane and fly it for the prize.

So the girls take off, all of 'em, with no holds barred, the dickens with the good Marquis of Queensberry—and the sky's the limit. And the rest of the story's yours, mah friends.

Kay Francis strolls through this one mostly, though she developed a very realistic impression of oil-smeared fag in the last laps of her race. Incidentally, we'll never forgive Orry-Kelly for crowning La Francis with that gosh-awful ostrich bedizened bonnet in the earlier sequences.

As for William Gargan—say, are you kosher? So am I. Everybody is going to like Maxie Rosenbloom in this pic. We should have mentioned him before. He plays Gargan's man Friday, also he's just the same "Smacksie Maxie"—still one of the best bets in the leaping photographs, natural as those knockouts he knows all about from the canvas.

Histrionic Dead Heat

The rest of the acting is a tie between Eve Arden, Eddie Foy, jr., and Sheila Bromley. We liked Arden because she's a realistic little cuss and looks like a million in butter-bean pants. But Eddie Foy is pretty slick, too, as the "nut" flier who lands on toppa the world. Sheila does a nice chore also, but a bit too lacquered.

The air shots are beautiful, especially those showing the flying between sweet and stormy weather.

Shorts are up to the Met standard which is high and hard to beat. Buddy Rogers does the best musical short we've ever seen. The science reel of odd occupations is topped by cinema star Jean Parker's dress-designing venture.

You'll also see that fine old training ship, the "Joseph Conrad" in color, and a newsreel of spring inspiration.

Earle

Bristling with the brutal animosities of a wild and woolly day in the Old West and, at the same time, conveying a definite impression of the valor and strength that went into the winning of a continent, "Dodge City" yesterday took its place among the three pictures that have been continued for a second week on the screen of the Earle Theater within the last decade.

This was a tribute to the merit of the picture that seems well deserved. "Dodge City" lays no claim to delicacy, subtlety or any of the other gentler qualities of "refined" drama. It sets out to paint a vivid picture of tumultuous days in the lives of stalwart men and women and does so in broad and flamboyant strokes. "Dodge City" was the capital of the cattle-driving country shortly after the Civil War and was as wide open and riotous as any cowtown of comparable size ever might hope to become. Through its streets strode some of the highest types of American citizenry and some of the lowest. It is in the clash of these conflicting forces that the picture finds its power.

The pivotal characters in the play—and there are many that come under that blanket head—are impersonated with fine skill by Errol Flynn, as the young cattleman who becomes sheriff; Olivia de Havilland, Donald Crisp, Bruce Cabot and Victor Jory, as head men of the renegades; Alan Hale, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams and so many more that their names could not be recited here again.

The entire action of "Dodge City" is recorded in as fine a display of Technicolor as the screen has seen and altogether, as we have said so many times before, "Dodge City" becomes the top-ranking exhibit in its particular—or not so very—classification.

Harry Anger's "Youth Parade of 1939" stage revue also is continued for a second week at the Earle and, with its many talented performers, serves to round out a bill that will prove memorable to all who view it.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, April 14.—Chatted with Charles Boyer today, and he couldn't have been happier over the news that he is to co-star with Irene Dunne again. "Love Affair" has been such a box-office hit. This time he'll make screen love to her in "A Modern Cinderella" for John Stahl at Universal. Of course, bringing Irene and Charlie together again called for a lot of switching about and changing of the next Deanna Durbin picture, in which Boyer was to have co-starred with her. But Joe Pasternak is a resourceful gentleman, and he has "After School Days" all ready for the Golden Universal child, so she does this first and "First Love" later.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I am wondering, just off the record, if all the publicity given Deanna's real first romances, Vaughn Paul, might have been partly responsible for postponing her first grown-up love story in the movies. Universal has always acted so wisely in the selection of her movie stories.

The story of Lionel Royce, who is being tested by William Dieterle for the Lon Chaney role in "Hunchback of Notre Dame," is so fantastic it sounds more like fiction. He was driven from Germany in 1937 because of his Semitic birth and subsequently fled to the Alps. He changed his makeups, grew a beard, dyed his hair another color and then returned to Berlin. Posing as an Aryan, he made a great hit on the stage without being recognized. Later he was signed by Louis B. Mayer and brought to Hollywood, but for some reason M-G-M did nothing with him. Dieterle saw him in a German refugees presentation of "William Tell" sponsored by Harry Warner and lost no time in testing him.

Maybe it will be Falstaff in "Henry IV" for Bill Fields instead of "Pickwick Papers." The backers of Lester Cowan rather favor the Shakespearean character. Personally, I vote for Dickens in this case and believe his Mr. Pickwick would be far better for Fields. Motion pictures based on Shakespearean plays have never been financially successful, no matter how well done they are. And that goes for "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Romeo and Juliet" and all the rest. Some way, this generation does not seem to care for Shakespeare on the screen.

Chatting over the telephone with Eddie Mannix, Norma Shearer heard that 9-year-old Virginia Weidler was about to be tested for the role of her daughter in "The Women." "We start," said Eddie, "as soon as I can find someone to make the test with her." "You've found her," replied Norma, who drove to the studio and spent three and a half hours playing stooge to the Weidler child. When George Cukor thanked Norma, she said, "Why thank me? If Virginia is to play my daughter, I am the one with whom she should be tested."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cary Grant and Phyllis Brooks are now as if they had never been apart—it's love again; the Spencer Tracys and Fred Astaires, war scares notwithstanding, sail for Europe shortly; wonder if President Cardenas of Mexico will accept Jack Warner's invitation to the "Juarez" preview? What with the Louis-Roper bout Monday night and the Basil Rathbone guild party tomorrow night the movie stars are all dated up. Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor, Hollywood's most romantic lovers, have ringside seats for the fight, so has George Raft. He'll sit with his pal, Maxie Rosenbloom. Joe E. Brown, one of our best fight fans, will be there early to visit the dressing rooms.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

What they call the romance of the turf may be readying another chapter, with its chief locale the old Benning race track and historic Churchill Downs as the scene of a crashing climax. Listen:

Fifteen years ago in the fall when a freight train pulled into the old Benning siding, a tow-headed kid from Idaho tumbled out of a box car and into his hands was shoved the business end of a stable rake. He had hiked his way to Benning in a horse car with a shipment of thoroughbreds of the Nevada Stock Farm. He wanted to ride race horses.

POVICH

Around the Nevada Stock Farm stables at Benning, the lad got only the most menial tasks. He walked the horses around the ring to cool 'em out after other stable boys had exercised them. He polished tack, learned what to do with a skillet, raked the ring. By night his bed was in the barn.

He's back at Benning now. Back in the same barn where he slept as a stable roustabout. But it has been re-done. It is fixed up as something of an office. And the Idaho kid is the boss around the place. He's chief trainer for the W. L. Brann stable. And at Benning these days he commands attention. For in the Brann stable is the only Kentucky Derby candidate which wintered in Maryland.

The lad who hitch-hiked his way to Benning 15 years ago is Lou Schaefer. And the horse he is prepping for the Derby is Challedon. Schaefer and Challedon are a pair to be reckoned with in the Derby, if you believe the future books. At this distance, Challedon is 8 to 1, the highly respected third choice behind El Chico and Technician. The stable boy of 15 years ago is holding a potent hand in the 1939 Kentucky Derby.

The 'Idaho Kid' Commanded Respect

"The Idaho Kid," they used to call Schaefer when he graduated from stable slavey to exercise boy back there at Benning. The clockers, who never were any great hand at knowing names, tagged him that. It was their business to know what boy was riding a horse in those morning workouts, and they recognized Lou Schaefer as the tow-headed lad who was so handy at breaking the 2-year-olds out of the gate. Because he came from Idaho, he probably commanded some respect anyway. Another pretty fair jockey named Earl Sande hailed from Idaho.

Like his friend, Sande, Lou Schaefer hung up his riding tack six years ago. He left the saddle with a pretty fair record. He was astride the Preakness winner, Dr. Freeland, and he was the star rider for the Walter K. Salmon stable which featured the consistent Display. He was an amazing hand at getting those 2-year-olds away from the barrier, and perhaps that's why he came up with a nice juvenile in Challedon.

Lou Shafer hasn't changed much. He still does everything around the stable, from cooling the horses out to grabbing a stable rake. On the scales, however, he represents a slight difference. The lad who used to ride at 100 pounds, now hits 150. And, as we were saying, with weight he has taken on importance.

Groomed the 'Big Horse' Throughout Winter

Throughout the winter, he had the "big horse" of the Benning Colony. He had Challedon in training. And because Challedon was the winner of three futurities and a Derby candidate, he was the "big horse," even though he is not a big horse. It is the loose and lusty language of the race tracks. Man o' War was not overly big, but because of his feats he was known to grooms and stable boys as "Big Red." They reserve "big horse" for the best horse on the ground.

At Churchill Downs, for the first time, Challedon will be meeting up with El Chico, the 2-year-old champion of 1938. Despite the three Futurity triumphs of Challedon last year—he won the Maryland, the Pimlico and the Narragansett Futurities—he was never in the same race with the fashionably bred El Chico. And there is a reason.

Challedon, early last season, was regarded as merely another Challenger II colt. His stake qualities were unknown, but precedent was against him. Challenger II, purchased for $100,000 from English owners by Brann and Castle, two retired advertising tycoons, had been a rank disappointment as a stallion. In his first three years in the stud he had not produced a single outstanding colt.

They Learned to Regret Their Error

Thus the owner of Challedon did not think it good business to pay the fees demanded of entries in such as the Belmont Futurity. They would enter the cheaper futurities. They did, and learned to regret their error. For Challedon flowered as the finest colt ever sired by Challenger II. It might have been Challedon, not El Chico, in the $100,000 Belmont.

The history of Challenger II should deserve a separate chapter, incidentally. Messrs. Brann and Castle, intrigued by the British colt's performances on the English turf, commissioned Chris Fitzgerald, New York Sun turf writer, to buy him for them. They agreed to go as high as $100,000, a sum that fetched Challenger II to this country.

The workouts of the British colt on the Eastern tracks were amazing. He appeared ready to win at the first asking. But Brann and Castle were biding their time. They refused to race him in the East. They were pointing him for the rich Agua Caliente Handicap on the coast. They wanted to "win him out," meaning that they wanted to win the $100,000 Agua Caliente and thus get back their full investment in his first race. Challenger II didn't win the Agua Caliente. He broke down and was retired to the stud.

But he has produced Challedon and at Benning where former Stable Boy Lou Schaefer is bossing the workouts, they will tell you that Challedon is in good hands.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, April 14.—The New York racing season opens tomorrow with three added attractions:

1—How will the customers take to Don Meade, whose crooked riding pitched him out of racing for three years?

2—Is this the last year that betting at New York tracks will be done through bookmakers?

3—Will Frank Erickson, personally attacked by Mayor LaGuardia, take his place among the hundred or so bookies who will welcome the suckers with ever loving arms?

CONSIDINE

The traditional apathy of horseplayers toward right and wrong is chiefly responsible for Meade's return. That and the fact that he had political pull not available to other jocks who have sinned against the rather tarnished codes of the game. Perhaps only in racing could Meade have been re-legitimatized, for the blind who follow the gee-gees have long since stopped looking for a fair shake and are numb to deals which would cause a fan of any other sport to tear down the house.

It will be interesting, however, to note what kind of reception Meade will get and to see whether his amazing streak in Florida shortly after he was restored to good standing there—can be duplicated in New York, where stewards have been forewarned that sympathetic fellow jockeys have been known to clear a path for him to win.

Jersey Ready to Cut in on Market

It will soon be time for New Jersey to vote in the mutuel machines and cut in on the rich New York market—particularly the blue-shirt and dirty collar trade that never feels very comfortable at the swank New York tracks. Once New Jersey opens racing it won't be long before New York legislators grab the lapels of New York racing and demand the tax share that it has long missed.

Nowhere in America, not even at the El Dorado tracks of California, is there as much money bet as at the five New York tracks. It has been estimated as high as $200,000,000 for the season, a sum which would net any other racing State in the United States about $7,000,000.

With 16,000,000 persons living in what is called the Metropolitan District, and 3,000,000 visitors expected during the two-year span of the New York World's Fair, New York is almost certain to vote in the "machines" for only through this kind of betting can the State be assured of its tax cut—usually 3½ per cent. Nothing, however, will be done until Jersey makes its move, with a track that will be closer to Times Square than any New York track is. More than one statesman is convinced that pari-mutuel racing in New York would triple the amount this would pay for the State's entire unemployment bill, and pave the way for a reduction in the State's personal income tax burdens.

A tart correspondent reminds us that only 10 New York bookmakers out of 100 regulars at the horse parks made money last year, so generous were they in their odds. And that for the most part their books averaged only 1 per cent profit, where a pari-mutuel machine takes as much as 18 per cent of the sucker' dough for taxes, track's cut and breakage. However, we have yet to detect the name of any bookmaker on a WPA roll and we note that more than 100 are ready and willing today to be bled by the public. It just doesn't seem possible that they'd carry philanthropy to such an end.

Erickson Rapidly Becoming Citizen

Erickson is rapidly becoming a legend among United States horseplayers. The silent man, who is a civic-minded citizen of Forest Hills, was recently called a "dangerous character" by Mayor LaGuardia after a local horse-playing judge was accused of taking bribes. LaGuardia went on to say that Erickson should be "run out of town,"

Krakauskas to Hurl Nats' Opener Monday

Red Ruffing to Pitch For Yanks; Griffmen Face Baltimore Orioles Today

By Shirley Povich.

Joe Krakauskas vs. Charley Ruffing.

That will be the pitching program on Monday at Griffith Stadium when the Nats and Yankees launch the second century of baseball with the opening game of the American League season.

Manager Bucky Harris, of the Washington club, with a great show of confidence in Krakauskas, announced yesterday that the broad-backed Lithuanian left-hander would get the opening-game assignment despite his mediocre showing in recent games.

"I am sticking with Krakauskas," said Harris yesterday. "Since we started training on February 1, I've been pointing him for this opening game and I'm not ready to give up on him yet. To me he still looks like our best pitching bet."

Good Showing in South

Two weeks ago, Harris had indicated that Krakky would get the opening-game job. The big southpaw was making a profound impression in the South. Over a stretch of 18 innings, he allowed only seven hits and gave up no runs. He appeared to be curbing his wildness and Harris was elated.

But Krakauskas' last two starts against the Boston Bees have been disastrous. In 13 innings against the Boston club he has yielded ten runs. Pounded for five runs and nine hits in seven innings by the Bees on Thursday, he appeared to have lost the opening-game assignment. Until Harris' emphatic statement yesterday, it was believed that the honor would go to the veteran Jimmy DeShong.

That big Charley Ruffing, leading pitcher of the American League last year, will be the Yankees' pitching choice is obvious. Ruffing's lone competitor for the honor, Lefty Gomez, pitched three innings in an exhibition game yesterday, thus eliminating himself from duty on Monday.

Nats Practice

An open date on their exhibition schedule did not mean an off-day for the Nats yesterday. Manager Harris herded his athletes onto the diamond for a morning practice, resplendent in their new uniforms complete with zippers and the Baseball Centennial emblems.

The same lineup that has been carrying on for the Nats in their exhibition games will take the field against the Yankees in the opener. In the lead-off place in the batting order will be George Case. Buddy Lewis will hit in second place, to be followed by Bobby Estalella, Taft Wright, Buddy Myer, Cecil Travis, Rick Ferrell and the pitcher.

Today the Nats engage the Baltimore Orioles at Griffith Stadium in their last appearance before the opener. Dutch Leonard will pitch the early innings, to be followed by Roberto Ortiz, the large Cuban, who will be making his Washington debut.

Man Stubs Toe, Endurance Race With Horse Off

Edmonton, Alta., April 14 (Canadian Press).—Holding a three-lap lead, Bobby Bower, 45, abandoned today a six-day endurance race with a horse because of a sore toe.

Bower, who toured the half-mile track 169 times since the race started Tuesday, stubbed his toe Wednesday. It became too tender for running today.

The horse, My Prince, completed 196 circuits.

Dodgers-Yanks Battle to 8-8 Tie at Flatbush

10,000 See Game Called In Ninth; Sington and Dickey Get Home Runs

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, April 14.—The world champion New York Yankees cracked the Brooklyn Dodgers' string of exhibition game victories today but only to the extent of getting an 8-8 tie in a game ended by darkness after the ninth inning.

The Yanks tied it up in the ninth when George Selkirk's single with two out sent home two runs. Previously they had hammered Whitlow Wyatt for five runs in the first inning only to see the Dodgers go ahead on Fred Sington's homer in the fourth. A four-bagger by Bill Dickey accounted for three Yankee runs.

A crowd of 10,241 saw the game.

Worcester, Mass., April 14 (AP).—The Red Sox, fresh from the South, defeated Holy Cross, 14 to 2, on a cold, windswept field here before 4,500 today.

Holy Cross was playing its first game.

Rookie Ted Williams hit a homer in the first with the bases full and the Sox coasted while Bagby and Wilson held the college boys to five singles.

A wild pitch and an error gave Holy Cross its only runs.

Corruption Charged At Florida Tracks

Senator Graham, Who Proposed Investigation, Says He Can Prove One State Official Admitted Having Been Bribed

By the Associated Press.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 14.—Amid charges of bribery, graft and corruption, the Florida Senate today ordered an investigation of racing in the State's rich lower East Coast tourist section.

Senator Ernest Graham, of Miami, who proposed the investigation, said he could prove that one State official admitted having been bribed.

He did not name this official but promised to do so during the public investigation.

He charged the race track at Hialeah, suburb of Miami, controlled its surrounding municipality, and that Miami track operators were responsible for "killing" Gulfstream Park at Hollywood, Fla., where Jack Horning kept the races going only three days after investing what Graham estimated at more than $1,000,000.

WIDENER

Graham said he wanted to show that Joseph E. Widener, head of the Hialeah Park track, had "bewailed" the necessity for paying money to 47 legislators during the 1937 session.

Graham engaged in wordy controversy with Senator Beacham, of West Palm Beach, whose district also embraces much of the lower East Coast.

"I personally never have smelled the stench he's talking about," Beacham said.

Beacham came to the defense of Widener, who, he said, "has the respect not only of Miami and Florida but of the world."

Graham brought the name of Gov. Fred P. Cone into the debate with the statement that the chief executive ordered his racing commission chairman, Park Glover, "to kick out" a bookmaker who had been removed from the Hialean track, then reinstated by Widener.

Dozen Scribes Still Select Yanks Second

78, However, Believe Champs Will Repeat, Annual A.P. Poll Shows

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—There are still an even dozen hardy souls among the Nation's baseball "experts" who can't see the Yankees as American League champions.

That number among the 90 baseball writers in the Associated Press annual poll failed to name the three-time world titleholders to wind up with the American League pennant again. Ten of the dozen votes went to Boston's improved Red Sox, and the other two were handed to Cleveland's unpredictable Indians.

The dozen diehards, however, didn't go too far out on the limb. All figured the Yanks couldn't wind up any worse than second place.

On a point basis—eight for a first place ballot, seven for second, six for third, etc.—the 78 pennant selections and the 12 runner-up votes gave the Yankees a total of 708 points, 86 more than the Red Sox, whose second place finish in 1938

Star Allows Wolverines Only 6 Hits

Terp Ace in Rare Form as Mates Snap Losing Streak; Fans Eight Opponents

By Jack Munhall.

Crafty Earl Springer, perhaps the greatest southpaw pitcher ever developed at Maryland, fed Michigan's hungry pack of Wolverines a steady and undigestible diet of speed and curves yesterday to register impressively his third straight victory as the Terps simultaneously snapped a two-game losing streak.

By the score of 4-2 the Old Liners bounced back after consecutive setbacks by V. M. I. and Boston College to deal Ray Fisher's Midwestern nine its second loss in two days in the District.

Springer, though the Wolverines halted his string of scoreless innings at 21 in a row with a run in the sixth and thereby squelched his bid for a third straight shutout, was a great college pitcher again yesterday.

The slender junior ace from Hagerstown allowed the Wolverines only six safeties, two of them of the scratchy variety, and otherwise completely shackled the same heavy-hitting lads who reached four Georgetown pitchers for ten hits and 11 runs the previous day.

Eight Strike Out

Eight of these Michigan hitters he struck out with an excellent assortment of deliveries, and four of the eight took the third strikes with their bats helplessly on their shoulders. For Mr. Springer reall, poured it to 'em, mowing down the opposition with such rock-like precision that there neve. was the slightest doubt of the outcome, what with the Terps holding a 2-0 lead after the second inning.

Working carefully as if each batter were a potential home-run hitter, Springer se.dom was behind as evidenced by the fact that the only two Michigans walked did so after a 3 and 2 count.

Even with Springer in the same near invincible form that carried him to a five-inning no-hit no-run game against Rutgers and a full nine-inning shutout of Dartmouth, the Terps had no easy time of it.

For a big, husky gent named Dan Smick was pitching for Michigan and doing no bad job. Matter of fact Smick was beaten only because he received atrocious support. Two unearned Maryland runs clattered over the plate in that fatal second when Second Baseman Lisagor and young Walter Peckinpaugh, son of the old Nat shortstop, bobbed up with a trio of damaging errors. And again in the eighth when the Terps scored their final tally, Smick had grounds for a suit of nonsupport against his teammates.

Four Hits, Four Runs

On four hits, only a double by Adam Bengoechea being better than a single, Maryland scored its 4 runs to deal the broad-shouldered Smick another jolt, such as he received Tuesday when Georgetown made its winning run off him in the ninth.

After Springer had presaged the great pitching feat he was to complete by retiring in order the first six Michigan batters to face him, the Terps profited by Lisagor's and Peckinpaugh's treason to the extent of 2 undeserved runs in the sixth. It happened this way:

Hugh Keller, brother of Charley, the Yankees' rookie outfield star, dropped a single to center and went to second as Eddie Johnson rolled to the pitcher. Peckinpaugh messed up Bob Burns' grounder to send Keller to third and allow the batter to reach first. With men on third and first the Terps worked a double steal. Burns dashed for second and beat the catcher's throw, and Keller fled to home. Peckinpaugh, taking the peg at second, removed any doubt that the Terp would score by flinging the ball yards over the catcher's head. Burns took third on the play and immediately scored when Lisagor bobbled Joe Crisafulli's fairly hard smash to second.

Fans Last Two

Thus betrayed, Snick decided to take upon himself the responsibility of getting the Terps out, for he fanned both Culver and Spriner to end the inning.

Michigan picked up a slightly tainted run in the sixth to make it 2-1. Peckinpaugh singled with one out and then after Elmer Gideon, big first baseman fanned, Elmer Trosko drove a liner to right which Keller apparently could hold to a single. But the ball took a crazy bounce, got away from the Terp rightfielder and rolled on to permit Peckinpaugh to tally and Trosko to get to third for a triple.

Maryland worked another double steal in the sixth to score its third

Monty Stratton Signed to Coach White Sox Club

Star, Crippled by Gun Shot, Hoping To Pitch Again

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—A long, lean fellow with a great heart—Monty Stratton—started all over on a baseball career today.

Less than six months ago Monty's diamond worth was well established. He had just finished a season in which he won 15 games to top all Chicago White Sox pitchers. Then last November 27 came the hunting accident which resulted in amputation of his right leg—apparently blasting forever his bright chances of becoming one of the finest young hurlers in the sport.

Stratton said today that isn't going to happen. He signed a coaches' contract with the White Sox. He will travel regularly with the club and coach at first base. But more than that, he said he's going to pitch major league ball again.

Hopes to Pitch Again

"You betcha I'm going to pitch again," he said with a grin which fairly glowed with confident determination. "It will take time because I've got to learn pitching from the mound all over again. But I've been throwing a little—better than I once thought I'd ever be able to—and by the end of this season I'll know for sure."

"The Gander," as he is affectionately tagged by his mates, slapped his wooden leg, strode briskly

Single Spoils No-Hit Game

Lynchburg, Va., April 14 (AP).—Hugh Stephens, Randolph-Macon College righthander, came as close to the hall of fame as possible today as the Jackets blanked the Lynchburg College's baseball team 10 to 0.

For eight and two-third innings the Jacket curver set the Hornets down without a hit and with two away in the ninth he had pitched two strikes to "Lefty" John Burnett, a Hornet pinch hitter.

On the next throw Burnett, who is a pitcher, banged a clean Texas leaguer into left field to spoil the afternoon for Stephens.

Boston Mary, With Dupuy Up, Wins Feature Race at Bowie

Sun Victor Second as Meeting Ends

Jockey Oros Rides Triple and Boosts Total Victories for Year to 105

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 14.—Refusing to stop as she did in her first appearance here, Boston Mary stuck to her racing guns this afternoon and won the outstanding race on the final program at this track. Driven along by Apprentice H. Dupuy, the veteran daughter of Bostonian, staged her own "tea party," to win from Sun Victor. Third money in the field of a half-dozen sprinters of assorted ages went to Little Drift. The camera was consulted to separate the second and third horses.

Boston Mary was only lukewarm in the Letting and produced an $8.30 mutuel. She was clocked in 1:14 while carrying 102 pounds, the lightest impost in the field.

The test marked the end of the "Oros spell" that hovered over the first part of the program. Johnny Oros, the Nation's No. 1 rider, piloted the first three winners.

Boston Mary had some trouble with Wise Sister in the early running, but she took command when asked and had enough left to stave off the closing rush of Sun Victor. Many believed that Oros waited too long with the latter.

Oros ran his total winners for the year to 105 and his string for the meeting to 18, by his three successes. He began by riding both ends of the $16.80 daily double. In the first race he brought Royal Cross up along the rail to win going away from Way Out and Unlimited. He asked Royal Cross, a $9.40 shot, for one move and that was the winning one in the stretch.

The ace rider came back in the second race with Jack Sting and scored an easy victory. The public backed the Sting colding down to a $3.70 mutuel and the horse ran accordingly. Currants was second and Shanteb was third. Oros again came from behind on the outside to take this race.

His triumph in the third race was just a gallop. Evening Light, 1 to 2 favorite, jogged away with her field. He Goes did some closing, but was beaten three lengths. Parvin drove all the way to be third.

Oros had a breather in the fourth race, sitting in the jockeys room while Hilton Dabson rode Cardell to the front and stayed there to bring his backers a $7.30 mutuel. Oddsbodkin was second and Blue Covert third.

Topee, owned by J. E. Hughes, proved the day's third winning favorite. The colt should ...ed 120 pounds and had little trouble taking down the main money. Pascua was second and Nicholas S. third.

A. C. Tumin's Mantagna, prominent stake winner in his youth, won the cheap claiming race that concluded the program and the meeting here. Paying a $10.30 mutuel, the 7-year-old son of Sweep downed Elsie J. and Principessa, among others. Apprentice R. Bateman rode the winner while Apprentice Oros was on the second horse.

FAIR SCOUT	(Mattison)	106½	10	1	8h	9½	10	10	6.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL CROSS, $9.40, $6.10, $3.60; WAY OUT, $14.60, $6.40; UNLIMITED, $2.90.

ROYAL CROSS, not hurried while racing forwardly on inside, responded to drive turning into stretch and under pressure, was up in closing 20 yards. WAY OUT pressed pace of ROMNEY ROYAL and held on gamely in final drive. UNLIMITED stumbled going to turn, recovered and closed with bold rush. MASKED PLANE was forward factor from start.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:03. Off 3:04. Winner, Mrs. F. West's b. g. (6), by Sting—Jackstones. Trained by V. Oden. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:14.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straights

CAIDON	(Wilmer)	112	4	3	3h	4½	8	8	38.25

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK STING, $3.70, $2.60, $2.30; CURRANTS, $3.20, $2.80; SHANTEB, $5.80.

JACK STING, allowed to race on own courage to turn, circled leaders swinging into stretch to take command and won with speed in reserve. CURRANTS set early pace and held on gamely, but was no match for winner. SHANTEB forced early pace and came willingly in final drive. FAIR ELISE rallied mildly in stretch after being off poorly.

Daily Double, Royal Cross and Jack Sting, Paid $16.80.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place same. Went to post 3:34. Off 3:36. Winner, J. M. Welch's ch. f. (3), by Jack High—Evening. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:14 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
EVENING LIGHT	(Oros)	102	2	1	1h	1h	1½	1½	$0.50
HE GOES	(Shelhamer)	122	4	5	5½	4½	2½	2h	4.45

KISSIN KID	(Machado)	115	3	3	4h	5nk	6	6	17.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVENING LIGHT, $3.00, $2.40, $2.20; HE GOES, $3.20, $3.00; PARVIN, $4.20.

EVENING LIGHT took command at once with ease, opened a good lead and was not threatened at any stage. HE GOES, slow to begin, improved position steadily on outside, was held safe. PARVIN was hard ridden, but dropped back gradually. MARGIE WRACK had good early speed to be closest to early pace, but weakened badly.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:03½. Winner, Liberty Lane Stable's br. c. (2), by Dr. Cardenas—Judelle. Trained by W. E. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 0:48 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
CARDELL	(Dabson)	115	8	1	1½	1½	1h	1h	$2.65
ODDSBODKIN	(E. Smith)	115	5	2	2½	2h	2h	2h	3.90
BLUE COVERT	(Snider)	114	7	4	4h	4h	4h	3h	6.25
SNOBBISH LADY	(Machado)	105	4	3	3h	3h	3h	4h	13.80
DANCE ON	(Bond)	116½	1	5	5h	5h	5h	5h	24.90
BONNY BRUSH	(Bateman)	108	2	6	6	6	6	6	11.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARDELL, $7.30, $3.90, $2.90; ODDSBODKIN, $3.70, $2.50; BLUE COVERT, $2.90.

CARDELL, first away, drew clear at once under strong handling and held ODDSBODKIN safe while kept to stiff drive. ODDSBODKIN, closest to pace from start, could not menace winner when placed to intermittent punishment in closing three-sixteenths. BLUE COVERT broke in tight quarters, was strongly handled and weakened in stretch. SNOBBISH LADY could not keep up.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:33. Winner, J. M. Brooks' b. m. (6), by Bostonian—Mary Rose. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:14.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
BOSTON MARY	(Dupuy)	102	5	2	2nk	2½	1nk	1h	$3.15

LITTLE DRIFT	(Martin)	112	4	3	3h	3h	2½	3nk	4.60
DISSEMBLER	(Shelhamer)	116	1	4	4nk	4h	3h	4h	4.50
WISE SISTER	(Mattison)	108	6	1	2h	1h	4h	5h	10.15
BABY SWEEP	(G. Smith)	112	2	5	5½	6	6	6	16.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOSTON MARY, $8.30, $4.10, $2.50; SUN VICTOR, $3.90, $2.40; LITTLE DRIFT, $2.50.

BOSTON MARY had speed to go to front, was rated when WISE SISTER took lead under hustling tactics, responded when placed to drive and held away to end under pressure. SUN VICTOR, slow to begin and allowed to lag for a quarter, came to outside for racing room entering stretch and closed with a bold rush to be going fastest of all. LITTLE DRIFT was forward factor from break, moved menacingly midway of stretch and hung thereafter. DISSEMBLER, outrun in early stages, saved ground entering stretch and weakened under punishment.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post 5:03. Off 5:04. Winner, J. E. Hughes' ch. c. (3), by Sun Hatter—Lady Panama. Trained by T. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:47 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
TOPEE	(Shelhamer)	120	1	2	3h	3h	1h	1½½	1st	$1.40

SCORIA	(Dabson)	110	3	1	5½½	5h	5h	5½	4h	13.15
BULLET B.	(Mills)	110	6	5	2½½	1h	2½½	4h	5h	8.30
SET PAT	(Snider)	106	2	6	6	6	6	6	6	4.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOPEE, $4.80, $3.20, $2.40; PASCUA, $4.80, $3.10; NICHOLAS S., $2.60.

TOPEE, under restraint while close to pacemakers, moved up gradually when asked to take command and drew out in easy fashion. PASCUA lacked early speed, improved position steadily and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. NICHOLAS S. set and forced early pace and tired in stretch run. SCORIA was outrun for half and closed a gap. SET PAT dwelt at start and was not extended.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:32. Off 5:35. Winner, A. G. Tumin's b. or br. g. (7), by Sweep—Nation. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:58.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

WALMISS	(Witmer)	110	6	5	1h	4½	7h	8½	9	53.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANTAGNA, $10.30, $4.30, $3.40; ELSIE J., $2.90, $2.50; PRINCIPESSA, $3.10.

MANTAGNA, well placed from start, came between horses on backstretch to take command, drew clear to shake off challenges of PRINCIPESSA and held away thereafter under drive. ELSIE J. raced closest to pace of MANTAGNA, dropped back and closed with good energy under drive. PRINCIPESSA moved up sharply along backstretch and continued gamely, but was held safe. ITALIAN HARRY was forward factor from start.

Widener Horses Tied

Joseph E. Widener has the honor of having bred two horses fast enough to share the track record for a mile and an eighth at Hialeah Park. Both Brevity, which set the track mark of 1:48 1-5 in 1936, and Stagehand, who equaled the record February 18, this year, were bred by Widener at his Elmendorf Farm in Kentucky.

Harford 'Cap Tops Program At Graw Today

Derby and Preakness Candidates in Action During 13-Day Meet

Havre de Grace, Md., April 14 (AP). A 13-day racing meet during which several Kentucky Derby and Preakness candidates will see action opens tomorrow at this course by the Susquehanna with the $5,000 Harford Handicap the first day's feature.

At least ten good sprinters are expected to go postward in the Harford, a 6-furlong dash. Belair Stud's Fighting Fox was top-weighted with 122 pounds, followed by Mrs. Louise Viau's Conquer with 121, Alfred Vanderbilt's Airflame, 120, and Howard Bruce's Jay Jay, 120.

Jay Jay, a 6-year-old campaigner, will be trying for a double in the Harford. He won it in 1936 and came back last year to finish a close second behind Brandywine stable's Masked General.

Other probable starters include Belair Stud's Stormscud, Felix Spatola's Wise Prince, Donald Christmas' Accolade, Millsdale stable's Rye Beach, A. C. C. stable's Sun Egret, J. W. Y. Martin's Battle Jack, Winston Guest's Drudgery, Bomar stable's Ben J. and Gustav Ring's Lady Maryland.

Some of the Nation's top-flight three-year-olds, eligible for the Derby or Preakness, or both, have been working out here for some time in preparation for the $15,000 added, mile-and-a-sixteenth Chesapeake Stakes, pre-Derby test to be run April 22.

Among the Derby-Preakness candidates being pointed for the Chesapeake are W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite, W. L. Brann's Challedon, Hugh W. Jackson's Ariel Toy, Saratoga stable's Volitant, A. G. Vanderbilt's Impound, Brandywine stable's Deil and Ral Parr's Ebonito.

Walter Hagen and W. W. Hinshaw Win Match at Columbia

71-Year-Old Golfer Sinks 50-Foot Putt

Shot Enables Team to Win Best Ball From McCleod, Stewart and MacKenzie, 1 Up

W. W. Hinshaw, 71-year-old former member of the Metropolitan Opera Co., was the individual attraction of an all-star foursome yesterday at Columbia as he dropped a 50-foot putt on the final hole that enabled him and Walter Hagen to win a friendly match by a 1 up margin.

Columbia professional Fred McLeod, Golf Committee Chairman Dr. Paul Stewart and Albert R. MacKenzie were the victims, after leaving the first tee as heavy favorites.

Hagen, winner of 50-odd major tournaments, and Hinshaw were 1 up on the eighteenth tee, and needed a halve for the match. They were both short of the green on the par four hole in two and Hinshaw chipped way past the pin on his third shot, while Hagen was short.

The former opera singer then stepped up to his putt, said "its a downhill putt," and calmly knocked it in the hole for the victory. Fred McLeod's birdie chip shot missed the hole and the match was over.

Hinshaw, the most remarkable golfer in this and probably any other city for his age, played the course in 75 strokes, and proved a valuable partner for the "Haig," whos e game showed a little rust. He was around in 73, however.

Hagen was out in 36 and back in 37 for the 73, and he and Hinshaw had a best ball of sub-par figures. McLeod holed a pair of chip shots during the match, while Hinshaw's final putt was not the only long one he holed, dropping one nearly that distance on the fourth hole.

Hagen will remain in town over the weekend, visiting the various courses in the interests of his clubs.

Leo Walper Watches All-Star Match

Leo Walper, back from the winter tour and hard at work on his driving range on the East-West highway, took time off to watch Hagen play a few holes.

Walper had a successful trip and declares his game is near perfection off the tee and on the green, and he will remain hard at work for the National Open and P. G. A., in addition to the local pro schedule.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion is going to West Virginia in a week or two for some wood chopping, his idea of the greatest method of perfecting a golf stroke. He will remain nearly a week.

Hagen paid Walper a fine compliment in the grill room of the Columbia Club after the match, saying to a group of members, "there's a fine, hard working golfer," pointing to Leo, seated a few tables away.

Pistol League Opens Tomorrow

Fredericksburg, Va., April 14.—The Fredericksburg Pistol and Revolver League will get underway at the Fair Grounds armory here Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Dr. Richard N. Lanier, captain of the local police pistol team, announced today.

Tomorrow's match is a preliminary shoot and the results will not count in the final league standings.

A total of 10 matches are to be fired, Dr. Lanier said. They will be fired every other Sunday after the opening Sunday, April 23.

Following the team matches each Sunday afternoon, Dr. Lanier said, an individual competition with the .45 calibre service pistol will be held.

A silver cup is to be awarded the winning team. There will also be four additional prizes.

Although the entry list is not yet complete, Dr. Lanier said teams would come from Washington, Richmond and Quantico to compete.

Reddish Signs

Philadelphia, April 14 (AP).—Promoter Herman Taylor announced today that Willie Reddish and Gus Dorazaio, both Philadelphia heavyweights, had signed for a ten-round bout here April 24.

Little Red-Headed Lass Leads W. & L. Into Baseball Wars

Post Staff Photos.

Girl Manager of W. & L. High Nine Is Making Good Her Boast

Mary Brown Promised Coach She Would Make Fine Pilot; Worked Three Years for Post

By Bill Burnett.

Three years ago, almost to the day, Coach "Buck" Richardson was checking over the uniforms his Washington-Lee High baseball players were to wear in the forthcoming season. Every now and then he stopped to add another name to a growing list of youngsters who hoped to fit into those uniforms.

There was a timid knock at the door. A little girl, distinguished more than anything else by a bumper crop of freckles and a mop of flashy, red hair, stepped inside and closed the door behind her.

"Well," Richardson said in his gruffest tone.

"I'd like to know," the lass said, between the audible chattering of her knees, "if you'd like a manager for your baseball team—ah—me, maybe."

In the course of his coaching career since leaving William and Mary College, Richardson had run into some posers. This was one.

"Why?" was the best he could do at the moment.

"I'd make a fine baseball manager," the little red-head announced, a little bolder. "I already know how to keep score, and the rest'll come easy."

Ruth Brown didn't get the job then, however, nor did she get it the next year, nor the next. But before that initial interview was concluded, Miss Brown had wrung from Washington-Lee's baseball coach a promise that if she faithfully kept score for the Little Generals for three years, she could—despite custom, tradition, and what have you—be a full-fledged manager in her senior year.

Ruth is now the manager.

She was second in command to Coach Richardson yesterday when the Arlington nine engaged its third regularly-scheduled opponent of the season, Fredericksburg High, and walked away with a comparatively easy 9-6 victory. It was the third straight triumph of the season for Washington-Lee lads, and as usual they gave much of the credit to their efficient manager.

The admiration of her underlings stirs Miss Brown not at all. She is all nonchalance and business. These lads aren't the only baseball acquaintances she has. Clark Griffith, whether he knows it or not, is listed as one of her pals, and so is Trainer Mike Martin. One of her choice recollections is the long chat she once had with the "Old Fox" of the Nationals.

"My baseball acquaintances won't be complete, however," she sighs, "until I get to meet Jimmy Bloodworth. Gee, isn't he good-looking?"

The accomplishments of Ruth don't stop with the precedent she overcame to get to be manager of a boys' ball team. She's the edtior-in-chief of The Crossed Sabers, student paper of Washington-Lee, and she's a lieutenant in the girls' cadet corps. She swims, rides, plays most of the girls' games, with the exception of softball.

Following is the schedule of Washington-Lee High, arranged and released by Manager Ruth Brown:

April 14, Fredericksburg; 18, G. W. High; 20, Mount Rainier; 21, Falmouth; 25, Fairfax; 26, Anacostia; 28, Eastern.

May 1, Roosevelt; 4, G. W. Frosh; 9, Briarley M. A.; 10, at Montgomery Blair; 12, to Eastern; 15, at G. W. High; 17, Devitt Prep; 18, Montgomery Blair; 19, at Fredericksburg; 23, Western; 26, Bethesda-Chevy Chase; 29, at Mt. Rainier.

Wilson High Nine Defeats B.-C.C., 8-3

Two Prize Pitching Prospects Unleashed In Byer and Welles

Two of its prize pitching prospects for the 1939 interhigh baseball series were unleashed yesterday by Woodrow Wilson High as it hammered out an 8-to-3 victory over Bethesda-Chevy Chase on the Garrett Park diamond. Herman Byer, workhorse of the Presidents last year, proved he was back in form with a five-inning stint, during which he allowed only six hits. And Joe Welles, lanky left-hander, took over the job for the final four frames, to issue only one safety.

Credit for the victory, however, belonged more to the wildness of Bethesda's hurler than to Wilson's pitching or hitting. In the first two innings, Danny Welles, who went the distance for Bethesda, saw seven runs cross the plate, most of them through wildness on his part. Wilson started off with four runs and added three more, to put the game on ice before the third inning began.

With the score 7 to 0 against it, Bethesda tried valiantly to get back into the game, but its first run did not come until the fourth. A triple by Custer and a single by Eaton brought the first score in, and in the next period it added two more pointers. Russ Mizel, centerfilder of the suburbanites, rammed a homer into the far flung distances out toward right field, and Kinsman scored ahead of him.

From there on it was a pitching duel. Danny Welles, for Bethesda, settled down and gave up only one more run. The total hits off him was seven, though he allowed nine walks. He fanned ten men in the nine innings. Joe Welles, who took over where Byer left off, walked only one man in four innings and turned in nine strikeouts.

Besides the homer of Mizell, Custer was the only one able to get an extra base hit.

Select Field Goes to Post In Middleburg Race Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., April 14.—Small, but classy, will be the field that will race in the Middleburg Cup Steeplechase, feature of the annual spring Middleburg races tomorrow at the Glenwood Park Course. This feature event, carrying a $1,000 purse, will have only four to go postward, but these include three of the best five timber toppers in America.

The favorite in the race is John Strawbrige's Coq Bruyere, who will get his first 1939 outing tomorrow afternoon and will attempt to sustain his almost unbeatable record against those of Mrs. Frank M. Gould's aged Ostend, leading timber topper of 1937, and who has enjoyed more races than any thoroughbred running over post and rails today. Paul Mellon's Faction Fighter, fresh from winning the Sand Hills and Carolina Cups, has rested and is considered to be in the best possible shape. The other horse to go in this event is Miss Theresa Schey's Terry's Winner, who came in ahead of Faction Fighter in the R. Penn Smith Memorial last fall.

R. P. Hamilton will ride Coq Bruyere. Ostend will be ridden by J. S. Harrison and Sidney Watters will pilot Faction Fighter. Henry Frost, jr., will be up on Terry's Winner. The other entries, Postman Home and Black Sweep will not go in this race.

The other timber race on the program, the Raymond Belmont, 3 miles over post and rails, has attracted 11 entries, proving that timber top racing is not on the decline. Bunree Bay and Music Mountain are the favorites. Mrs. Turner Wiltshire's Black Sweep in this race is a new horse in hunt race meetings.

The grounds are picturesque and beautiful and the track is in good shape. The going tomorrow will be good and if weather conditions are favorable, a record crowd is expected.

The first race, the Wanquepin, a 1½-mile hurdle will be called at 2 o'clock. Mrs. James C. Clark's Itsaboy and Mrs. Lewis A. Parks' Royal Thomas are the favorites. Three other races are on the program two brush and 1 mile turf race.

Timberville Beats Keezletown, 10 to 9

New Market, Va., April 14.—The Timberville High School defeated the Keezletown High, 10 to 9, on the winner's home diamond. Myers did the hurling for the Timberville High and gave up nine hits, walked one and fanned four men. Gibson, moundsman for the losers, allowed 10 hits, walked 6 and fanned 13 men. Billy Garber did the main batting for the winners, as he collected a home run, a double and a single.

Navy Plebes May Upset Varsity Today

Upperclassmen, Frosh In Traditional Track Meet This Afternoon

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, April 14.—Upperclassmen at the Naval Academy are seeing bogeymen in their sleep these nights—plebe bogeymen in track suits.

Upperclass nerves are frayed because lowly plebes, traditional brunt of academy pranks threaten upperclass supremacy in track tomorrow in a varsity-plebe practice meet.

The Navy babes have a dark horse phenom in big Ed Hahnfeldt, a strong man who heaves the shot, discus and javelin from hither to yon with a merry abandon delightful to plebe track coach Walter Aamond, but mighty disquieting to upperclassmen with a reputation to protect.

The husky plebe has already smashed existing varsity marks in the shot and discus, and this week casually tossed the javelin out 195 feet. (Note—Varsity Track Coach Earl Thomson's eyes gleam when he thinks of all those 1940 points Hahnfeldt will garner.)

Hahnfeldt's superiority in the weights gives the plebes three cinch first places. These, with the points some other cinder burners will pick up, have the varsity counting each possible score with care.

Leon Chabot, stock sprinter, holds the edge over the plebe aces Eric Hopley and Ray Herzberger, but the babes are ticketed to run two-three behind the veteran.

The babes will rate handicaps in some of the longer races, where Capt. Barney Oldfield of the varsity is a standout.

Coach Thomson said his squad had been slow in rounding into form because of inclement weather. Workouts have been devoted largely to leg conditioning and form training. The plebe varsity meet will be the first under meet conditions.

Navy's first official meet is a triangular contest with Princeton and Columbia here April 22. Results in the practice meet tomorrow will determine places at the training table and the squad for the balance of the season.

Capt. Oldfield and Chabot are sure point winners in any field. Other lettermen on the squad are Vince Healey, middle distances; Curt Spencer and Frank Blaha, in the broad jump; Dick Shafer, high hurdles; Andy Gardner, high jump, and Dick Karl, javelin.

Washington College Wins

Chestertown, Md., April 14.—Washington College trackmen took 10 of 12 first places and swamped Western Maryland, 82 to 26, in a dual track meet here today.

Western Maryland's Bender took the pole vault event with a 10-foot performance, and Lesinski put the shot 38 feet 8¾ inches, to win the only other event for the Western Shore visitors.

run after Michigan had cut the deficit to 2-1 in its half of the frame. A daring bit of base running by Adam Bengoechea, the mite of a lad who is replacing the injured Sherod Robertson at third base, Bengoechea walked, went to second on Knepley's sacrifice and stole third.

Then after Bob Burns drew a walk, he and Bengoechea perpetrated the twin larceny, aided by slow fielding by Peckinpaugh, who handled the throw to second.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

RUNYON

We have been asked to decide an unusual bet.

A bets B that the members of the House of Representatives of the United States are in general homelier than the members of the House of Commons of England.

We are inclined to think that it is a bet between an American and an Englishman. It may be a matter of either nation pride or prejudice.

In any event, we cannot render a decision here. In the first place, we never have seen the members of the House of Commons, individually or collectively. In the second place, we do not feel that we are sufficiently qualified as a judge of male pulchritude to pass upon this wager.

Offhand, we would say that our Congressmen are in general homelier than any similar body of gentlemen on the face of the earth, and lest this be set down as a boast born of patriotism, we will now project sound reasons why this is true.

First and foremost, it is common knowledge that it is much easier for a homely gentleman to get elected to Congress in this country, or to any other office, than it is for a handsome gentleman. The voters of the United States are inclined to take it for granted that a gentleman with a map that would stop a clock is by nature a kindly, honest, homespun guy, while they are likely to view with suspicion a gentleman with a Grecian profile, a high, white forehead, pearly teeth and wavy locks.

LaGuardia 100-1 Shot

For example, we will bet anything you like that we could offer Mr. Errol Flynn, of the cinema, and Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, under fictitious names as candidates for Congress to the folks at the forks of the creek, and they would take LaGuardia by 100 to 1 just on his looks, without either gentleman opening his mouth.

Mr. Flynn, you see, is rated handsome by persons professing authority in these matters, while Mayor LaGuardia's best friend and greatest admirer would scarcely call him anything but homely. If he did, Mayor LaGuardia probably would be good and hot about it.

This predilection of the American voters for homely blokes is all the more curious when you consider that in this country the ladies have the privilege of casting an untrammeled ballot, and you might think that they would incline toward Grecian profiles and pearly teeth and wavy locks, especially as against a gentleman resembling a haymow, but such is not the case.

As a matter of fact, it is not easy to get the ladies to vote for a member of their own sex who possesses unusual good looks, or that thing called glamor, whenever a lady of that type is elected to office, the gentlemen voters of a community are suspect in their family circles for some time to come.

No Phenomenon

We have not had occasion to look over the House of Representatives for a couple of years, but a glance at the roster indicates that

Minor Sports Hold Spotlight At Annapolis

Tennis, Sailing and Golf on Slate for Varsity at Home

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, April 14.—Minor sports hold the spotlight at the Naval Academy tomorrow, with the varsity baseball and lacrosse squads playing away from home.

Varsity meets in golf, tennis and dinghy sailing, plus "B" squad and plebe baseball, round out the quiet Saturday at the academy.

The varsity diamond dusters and the lacrosse stickmen journey to New Jersey to take on the Princeton stickmen and baseball teams.

Yatching is having a rebirth at the academy since the advent of Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent. Brown is actively promoting the sport and was instrumental in obtaining authorization for three 44-foot yawls now a-building in Connecticut, which will be raced next year.

Navy golfers will take on the Penn University linksmen in four-ball and singles matches, and the Middie tennis team meets the Princeton net squad.

The "B" baseball team is scheduled to go against the nine from the Associated Sixth District Democratic Clubs of Baltimore. Plebe baseball players will tangle with the City College (Baltimore) nine.

Washington-Lee Netmen Win, 9-0

Lexington, Va., April 14 (AP).—Playing near perfect tennis, Dick Clements, captain of the Washington and Lee tennis team, smashed out a 6—0, 6—0 victory today over Don Mitchell, of Hampden-Sydney, to lead his teammates to a 9 to 0 victory over the Tigers. It was Washington and Lee's second victory in as many days.

SINGLES—Clements (W.L.) defeated Mitchell, 6—0, 6—0; Washburn (W.L.) defeated Richards, 6—2, 6—3; Robinson (W.L.) defeated Allison, 6—1, 6—1; Pinek (W.L.) defeated Russell, 6—0, 6—2; Middelburg (W.L.) defeated Van Meter, 6—0, 6—1; McCutcheon (W.L.) defeated Gibson, 6—1, 6—2.

Cotton Men Urged to Pick Own Czar

Head of National Group Criticizes Federal Control

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, April 14.—The president of the National Cotton Manufacturers' Association warned today of Federal "dictatorship" peril but urged the industry to select its own "czar" who would "control production and put a price on our goods that will insure a fair return."

J. H. Cheatham, of Griffin, Ga., told the association's annual convention that in the national Administration's wage-hour policies there was an "apparently covert and planned procedure to gradually destroy the sovereignty of our States in favor of a Government centralized in Washington."

The Georgian said the textile industry was "producing goods which the market would not absorb" and recommended this situation be met by selection of a "czar" similar to those who direct the baseball and movie industries.

Cheatham said that the wage and hour act had been "seized upon by northern politicians to hamstring the South." He said the National Labor Relations Board majority and the Secretary of Labor had administered that act "partially and unfairly."

Dictatorships

"We are extremely critical of the personal dictatorships in Europe," he said, "and in this attitude we apparently have considerable comfort and support from many of those now in power in this Government.

"However, the principle of a dictatorship is not confined solely to those countries under the personal dominion of those with the technical title of dictators. Such a principle can be just as effectively exercised in a country that denominates itself a democracy when it abandons all regard for the majority will of those in a section thereof . . ."

Cheatham contended the South had been denied proper representation on the textile industry committee under the wage-hour set-up through "naming of 14 of the 21 members from Northern States and only 7 from the South."

He said Southern textile operators were not opposed to paying workers "a higher wage if conditions permit," but asserted the wage-hour law had been passed by Northern politicians "in an effort to hamstring Southern industry and draw the advantage back to their industries."

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, April 14.—The continued unsettled European political outlook caused persistent continental selling in the stock market today, which found supporting orders lacking. The industrial list was heavy. Capetown selling depressed kaffirs, with coppers and other base metals declining in sympathy. British funds were marked lower and foreign bonds dropped a point or more. Oil shares reacted sharply and transatlantics closed fractions to 3 points lower.

Paris.—The bourse closed weak and inactive today. Rentes lost 60 to 165 centimes and the international group was heavy. Bank of France and Royal Dutch diminished about 150 francs down and Suez Canal was off 210 francs.

Liverpool.—Short covering in wheat futures today was offset by liquidation. Final prices were unchanged to ½d up. The Far East continued to inquire for Australian wheat. Better support in cotton futures from local and trade interests, especially in near months, lifted prices 2 to 10 points today. Selling was mainly from Bombay sources.

Railroad Revenue For March 11.3% Above Year Ago

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 88 class one railroads had estimated operating revenues of $257,989,504 in March compared with $231,876,934 in March, 1938, and $370,168,402 in the same month of 1930. The association said the reporting carriers represented 81.9 per cent of total operating revenues of all class one railroads.

March operating revenues were 11.3 per cent above March, 1938, but 30.3 below March, 1930.

Freight revenues of the reporting railroads amounted to $211,034,976 in March compared with $185,327,568 in March, 1938, and $284,999,409 in March 1930.

Their passenger revenues totaled $25,472,504 compared with $25,392,971 in March, 1938, and $50,859,135 in March, 1930.

Cotton Prices Yield to Sales From Overseas

New York, April 14 (AP).—Selling by foreign interests was again the prime influence in a declining cotton market today. Final prices were 1 to 3 points net lower.

Market men seemed resigned to the dearth of Washington news on crop legislation, many brokers feeling action may await further easing of tension in the foreign situation.

Selling by Bombay—estimated at close to 15,000 bales—once more represented straddle liquidation. Another market depressant was hedging against South American cotton by a leading spot interest. Offerings were taken largely by ring professionals, with trade and New Orleans accounts also lending some support.

Worth street reported textile sales were limited to fill-in lots. Prices remained unchanged although concessions were believed available on large quantities.

Manufacturing Taxes Exceed 3% of Revenue

Steel Industry's Burden Highest, Food the Lowest

New York, April 14. Manufacturing industry paid out somewhat more than 3 per cent of aggregate sales in taxes during 1938, exclusive of Federal excise taxes, according to an analysis based upon the first 10,000 returns in the Dun & Bradstreet nationwide survey on "Taxes Paid by Business in 1938."

Among manufacturers, the iron and steel products group contributed 4.14 per cent of sales revenue to Federal, State and local taxes, in comparison to a composite average of 3.30 per cent for all manufacturing groups. Food processing paid the smallest amount, 1.69 per cent, with chemicals, drugs and paints second lowest with 2.81 per cent.

The survey, which was undertaken in December, 1938, with a nationwide questionnaire to 2,100,000 manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, brought a substantial cross-section of experience from businessmen all over the country. Economists from the United States Department of Commerce and the Treasury, Columbia University and New York University and a committee of the American Institute of Accountants assisted the Dun & Bradstreet staff in planning the survey.

Retailing 2 Per Cent

In contrast to manufacturing, retailing (excluding chains) paid about 2 per cent; and wholesaling 1½ per cent. The manufacturers' ratio, though already highest of the three, does not include any allowance for Federal excise taxes which are a substantial factor in certain industries, such as petroleum refining, tobacco and liquor.

Manufacturers of building materials, with one of the highest tax payment ratios of any of the eight industrial groups, 4.01 per cent of sales, offer a sharp contrast to food manufacturing in a number of respects. Federal corporation income taxes took more than three times as large a percentage of sales volume from this industry as from the food industries in 1938.

N. Y. Exchange Advises Members To Advertise

New York, April 14 (AP).—Financial advertising circles marked as a significant event today the action of the New York Stock Exchange in recommending to member firms that they advertise "constructively" to build up their business.

The new policy announced yesterday reverses what for years had been a highly restrictive censorship that all but discouraged any publicizing of stock exchange brokerage facilities in the advertising columns.

Commenting on the exchange's announcement, Russell Law, chairman of the executive committee of Albert Frank-Guenther Law, Inc., advertising agency, said liberalization of rules governing advertising and promotion activities of member firms "should prove effective in encouraging the development of new business for these firms."

William H. Long, jr., chairman of Doremus & Co., another advertising agency, said: "This step by the exchange enables member firms, for the first time, to utilize the full power of advertising to produce business. It represents an opportunity that progressive exchange firms will be quick to capitalize."

Cotton Consumption

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cotton consumed during March totaled 649,237 bales of lint and 73,769 of linters, compared with 562,293 of lint and 66,809 of linters during February this year and 512,626 and 62,270 during March last year.

Ten 'Best' Cities Include Washington

Washington is included in the list of ten cities in which business improvement has recently been outstanding, Forbes Magazine will say in its issue of tomorrow. The other nine cities are: Seattle, Wash., Portland, Ore., Columbus, Ohio, Springfield, Mass., Norfolk, Va., Camden, N. J., Sioux City, Iowa, Roanoke, Va. Specifically, in the cities named, business is said to compare more favorably with the same time last year than on any previous occasion since November, 1937.

Declines Follow Weakness Abroad Coal Troubles Threaten Industry; Bonds Irregular in Dull Trading

New York, April 14.—Weakness in European markets and overnight selling orders here sent share prices away to a bad start today. Offerings were on the large side in the first hour when quotations reached the lows for the session. Thereafter a creeping recovery set in which was not, however, sufficient to offset the morning drop. The 100 key stocks ended 0.49 point down, industrials being slower on the comeback than rails. Volume at 619,860 shares and issues traded, 707, were low since March 29.

Foreign exchange rates moved within narrow limits. While pressure continued against sterling, francs and guilders, controls operated successfully. Gold engagements, as officially reported, were smaller than on recent days. Cotton and wheat turned in negative performances, prices holding about even in both markets on sluggish trade.

While the mild reaction in security prices was in line with technical considerations and Wall Street expectations following three days of recovery, news of the day was distinctly of the kind that breeds caution rather than inspires confidence.

Coal Strike

The coal strike situation came in for more attention than it has since its start on April 1. Some evidence was at hand to show that some industries may be obliged to shut down unless fuel supplies are forthcoming rather promptly. A shipbuilding firm reported short of coal is engaged in the construction of three United States war vessels. Another report was that a leading electric power system had placed orders for coal abroad.

Steel operations were again lower in several districts, pointing to another decline in the national average which is currently not far above the halfway mark. In the foreign picture, German fleet movements off Spain and additional evidence of the mobilization of land forces by totalitarian countries, kept the war topic alive. On the domestic front, the President and Administrative leaders placed some more emphasis on what this country will do in behalf of its neighbors as well as itself when, as and if the international lid is blown off.

Adverse Factors

Wall Street appears agreed that three principal considerations are stifling buying interest. On the basis of brokers' letters to clients these are: Critical European situation; disappointing domestic business, and, the apparent relegation of the "business appeasement" program to a secondary place, or even its indefinite postponement.

Automobile shares made good recoveries after being depressed with other descriptions at the opening, due no doubt to an unexpected rise in assemblies for the week. The traders accepted the news as an indictation that motor car sales so far in April are better than expected.

Declines were general in all groups, with rail equipments and coppers being among the heaviest losers. Another small reduction in the price of scrap copper was felt, in metal circles, to have increased pressure against the recently cut domestic quotation on refined. Anaconda, one of the most active issues of the day, closed ⅝ lower. In the steel section, Bethlehem ended with a loss of more than a point, but Steele common eased only a small fraction. Loft, one of the leaders, gave up ⅜ of its recent large gains. U. S. Rubber led the list and was off ¼ at the close. Declines of a point or more appeared in Allied Chemical, du Pont, Johns Manville, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Texas Corp. Union Pacific was down 3. Of the 707 issues traded, 439 were lower, 26 at new lows for the year or longer, 123 advanced and 145 were unchanged.

Bond Trading Inactive

Listed bonds moved irregularly lower in an idle session today. Turnover was only $4,780,000, with the lack of interest apparently traceable to continued fears of unfortunate developments in Europe, where week-ends often are employed for startling changes. High-grade investment bonds were neglected and virtually unchanged. Among speculative issues the trend was slightly lower.

Foreign dollar obligations continued to attract attention. German issues steadied after their sharp drop of the previous day, but Italians again receded and are barely over bottom figures. The few trades in Polish bonds reflected heavy losses, while Belgian, Scandinavian and British empire bonds all reflected uncertainty. In the Latin-American default group Chileans were in modest demand, but others failed to show rallying power.

Secondary railroad liens in the corporate section were mostly down by small fractions. Borderline and default rails also drifted lower. Holding company bonds and convertible obligations were depressed by their related equities. Local tractions slumped with the rest of the market, as did communications, amusement and other special groups.

Long term United States Treasury issues hovered around former levels, with small fractional gains and losses equally numerous. Best grade corporate obligations were hardly traded, as most institutional investors prefer to await the new offerings which soon are to appear.

Copper Supplies Increase 13,277 Tons in March

New York, April 14 (AP).—Domestic stocks of refined copper increased substantially during March and small additions were made to foreign supplies, according to trade figures released today. World stocks of refined copper at the end of March totaled 506,391 tons, an increase of 13,277 tons over 493,144 at the end of February.

Domestic refined stocks rose to 320,446 tons in March, or 11,538 more than 308,958 a month earlier, while foreign accumulations amounted to 185,945, or a gain of 1,739 tons over 184,156 at the end of February.

World primary production increased 2,589 tons to 137,741. Domestic primary production stood at 49,915, up 267 tons, while overseas primary output increased 2,322 to 87,826 tons.

Apparent world consumption increased 8,868 tons to 149,596, domestic consumption advanced 2,419 to 48,067 and foreign consumption was up 6,049 to 101,531 tons.

Grain Prices Advance With Broad Demand

Corn Gains ⅜ to ¾; Wheat, Oats, Rye Also Show Gains

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—Active commercial demand for actual grain, with processors, industries and exporters buying, resulted in slightly higher prices in the spot and futures markets here today. Strength in corn values was most pronounced, but the effect of commercial activity was evident all through the list of grains.

Trading in futures was dull, with most speculative interests continuing to observe caution in view of the European situation. While war gestures restricted selling, few dealers showed any desire to buy on the strength of these developments alone.

Wheat fluctuated within a narrow range of only ⅝ cent and closed unchanged to ¼ higher compared with yesterday, with May at 69¾-⅞ and July 68½-¾. Corn was ⅝-¾ higher, May 48¼-⅝, July 49¼-50; oats and rye unchanged to ¼ up and lard 2 to 7 cents higher.

Pennsylvanians Beaten, 6-1, By Episcopal

Jack Burn Pitches Alexandrians to Victory Over Hill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, April 14.—Scoring five runs in the first two innings on a combination of two hits, six walks and an infield error, Episcopal High School's nine coasted along behind the airtight hurling of Jack Buck to turn back its intersectional rival, the Hill School of Pottstown, Pa., 6-1, here this afternoon. It was the Maroons' third victory in four starts.

The selection of Wodell to start the game for Hill spelled defeat for the Pennsylvanians, for the usually reliable righthander handed the Maroons the winning runs as the result of his own wildness in the first 1 2-3 innings. He was nicked for two runs in the opening frame as a result of Bragfield's single, two walks and Knox's error, while in the next stanza he gave up three more tallies by walking four batsmen and yielding a single to Dick West.

Rohr, who took over the mound duties with two out in the second inning, halted a rally by fanning Marty West, and then twirled effective ball for the remainder of the game. He gave up only three hits and struck out eight, but gave up one run in the fifth inning when his wild pitch followed successive singles by brothers Marty and Dick West.

Jack Buck turned in the finest pitching performance contributed by an Episcopal moundsman this season, giving the Hillmen four widely scattered hits, and failing to issue a pass.

there cannot have been any material increase in homeliness since we were last in Washington. On the contrary, it must have increased, as many of the same gentlemen are still present, and they necessarily get homelier from one year to another.

This is no phenomenon. It is well known that there is nothing that reduces pulchritude, male or female, like worry. A gentleman may be passably good looking when he is first elected to Congress, but then he starts worrying as to whether he is going to be re-elected at the expiration of his term, and if a gentleman is in Congress for a long period of years, he is worrying practically all that time.

Thus the worry produces physical deterioration. The gentleman's hair falls out, deep lines form in his face. His eyebrows grow as shaggy as a buffalo's mane. He is so busy worrying that he neglects such details as manicuring, dentistry, and the like. Eventually he is homelier than a mud fence, and therefore a hard man to shave in his home district. The homelier a Congressman gets the tougher he is to beat.

For some reason, Democratic Congressmen are as a rule homelier than Republican Congressmen. This is one thing we are unable to explain. It is also true of Democratic Senators, though oddly enough homeliness is not as necessary to a Senatorial career as it is to a Congressman. It helps, of course, but it is not essential. There are several fair looking Senators. There are only a few fair looking Congressmen, and they will probably get licked their next out.

We have seen photographs of some members of England's House of Commons, and while they may not have been good examples, we are inclined to doubt they would be one-two-three in homeliness with our Congressmen. The only thing we can give the Englishmen we saw pictured is they have straggler moustaches, and moustaches are pretty well out-moded as an aid to homeliness among American Congressmen. They look homelier without them.

Bearing Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

Seems that all this local war talk is like sky-writing with smudge pots. It's just to keep the political frost away from the potted palms and the plum trees.

Old Josh Billings classified that kind of hokum with the rings on raccoons' tails. Josh says they were purely ornamental.

In the first place why should we pull other people's chestnuts out of the fire when we have worms in our own? If you like quizzes start on that question.

Monty Stratton Signs as Coach Of White Sox

Star, Crippled by Gun, Hopes to Pitch In Majors Again

around the Sox office, then bent down as if fielding a ball.

"I can bend and catch easily," the 26-year-old Stratton continued. "The leg (patting the spot above the knee cap where the wooden limb begins as if to emphasize that he's not in the least sensitive about the handicap) never has been sore and when I bring it down hard it holds fine.

"There never was a time when I was completely down in spirits. I've received about 15,000 letters from men, women and children in every State of the Union. On Christmas Day, by actual count, I received 815 pieces of mail. Boy—did I enjoy reading them. It made me feel great inside. I'm determined to go along as if nothing much had happened—sure I'm going to hunt again—and as far as pitching big league ball again, I think it can be done.

"I'm not counting on it this year but I'm going to take care of this old right arm. I'll be using it again—from that old hill."

On Monday, the Sox and Chicago Cubs will play a benefit game from which Monty is expected to receive between $20,000 and $25,000. Team officials, players, writers all are buying tickets and parking lot companies are to turn over to Stratton all proceeds of the day's business.

and improvement by trades over the winter made them the choice to wind up in the No. 2 slot again. In addition to the first place selections, the Red Sox were picked 66 times for second, 11 for third, 2 for fourth and 1 for fifth.

Closest battle in the balloting was that for third place, which went to the Indians by nine points over the Detroit Tigers. The Washington Nationals, Chicago White Sox, St. Louis Browns and Philadelphia Athletics trailed in that order.

But Connie Mack's collection of youngsters were by no means overwhelming choices for the cellar. Thirty-two of the 90 writers figured they could finish anywhere from fourth to seventh.

Perhaps the most amazing feature of the voting found the Brownies selected once for third place, a dizzy height they have managed to reach only five times in their 37-year history.

Thurman High Nine Beaten by St. Peter's

Frederick, Md., April 14.—Thurmont High School, scholastic baseball champion of Frederick County, was beaten today by St. Peter's high school of New Brunswick, N. J., 15-8. The losers drove Toner from the mound in the first inning with a three-run rally, but found Lefty Tanzzo puzzling. Tackacs, of the Saints, hit a home-run in the seventh.

Warrenton Rally Gains 5-2 Win Over Bealeton

Warrenton, Va., April 14.—Coming from behind after trailing by a 2-1 count throughout the first five innings, Warrenton High School defeated Bealeton, 6-3, in a well-played game on the losers' field today. Four runs in the fifth changed the entire complexion of the game. Warrenton added a final run in the eighth to clinch matters. Bealeton got only five hits, while the victors collected eight.

triple, Joe Medwick led the St. Louis Cardinals to a 17-to-3 victory today over the Union City Greyhounds of the Kitty League.

After Ken Raffensberger and Bill McGee hurled the first eight innings Pepper Martin, Cardinal captain in charge of the squad in the absence of Manager Ray Blades, nominated himself for mound duty in the ninth and held his opponents scoreless.

The Cardinals left for St. Louis after the game for the opening of their two-game city series with the Browns. On their exhibition spring tour, they have won 24 out of 32 games.

Athletics Finally Wallop Williamsport Grays, 14-2

Tarboro, N. C., April 14 (AP).—The Athletics walloped the Williamsport Grays, of the Eastern League, 14 to 2, today behind the five-hit pitching of Bud Thomas. The victory gave the A's an even split in their four-game series with Williamsport.

Pete Blumette's wildness helped the A's pile up a 13-0 lead in the first four frames to win easily. One of Williamsport's runs came on a homer by Taylor.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A resourceful declarer rarely needs to concede defeat, and you seldom see him put his hand down until he has exhausted every possibility to make his contract.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

◇ A K 10 9 5 3
♣ 9 3

♠ A J 10 4 — ♡ Q J 5 3 — ◇ 6 — ♣ Q J 6 4
♠ 9 6 3 — ♡ 10 8 7 — ◇ J 8 4 2 — ♣ 10 8 2
♠ K Q 7 — ♡ A K 4 2 — ◇ Q 7 — ♣ A K 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ♠

See if you can make three no-trump with the lack of spades opening on today's hand. H. L. T., a British player, did.

Solution

South wins with the spade queen and, realizing that he must bring in the diamond suit, as the chances of his winning two spade tricks is remote, he leads the seven of diamonds, overtaking with dummy's ten. This loses to East, who returns a spade, but South wins his contract, as West has but four spades.

South runs a risk in finessing the diamond, for if West has five spades he would be defeated, but it is the best chance, under the circumstances.

Deadline Nears, Keyser Unopposed For Luray Mayor

Luray, Va., April 14.—With the deadline less than 24 hours away, one candidate each had filed for mayor in the towns of Luray and Shenandoah, three of Luray's present councilmen had filed for re-election, and ten candidates for the six places as councilmen in Shenandoah had filed.

Robert Keyser, county commissioner of accounts, is candidate for mayor of Luray to succeed Rev. A. L. Bolick, who so far has not filed for re-election. In Shenandoah Dr. B. C. Shuler is a candidate to succeed James L. Foltz, bank president, who so far has not offered for re-election.

The three councilmen filing in Luray are Robert Harnsberger, S. S. Shandelson, Ralph E. Mims. In Shenandoah the following incumbent councilmen have filed: John Callary, J. D. Hodges, jr., A. S. Sullivan, and C. C. Morrison, and the following new aspirants: B. T. Milton, H. E. Karnes, Floyd E. Stanley, B. C. Kibler, Edwin K. Booton, and W. H. Bricker.

Richmond Fire Ruins Searched for Clews

Richmond, Va., April 14.—(AP)—Assistant Fire Chief Raffo and a crew of inspectors searched the ruins of the Virginia Bottle Company plant today for clews to the cause of the fire which destroyed the building yesterday afternoon. Damage was estimated at $23,000.

Two firemen were injured. Ralph S. Avent was hurt when he fell from a ladder, and Louis Anthony Giannetti was injured by an iron door falling on him.

Sign Removal to Start

Winchester, Va., April 14.—D. R. Ralston, jr., highway landscape superintendent for the Highway Department, of Staunton, Va., announced here today that a crew of workmen will begin dismantling unlicensed roadside signs in Frederick County on Monday, April 17.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

THE Association of Nonclassified Federal Employes made an interesting case for noncompetitive examinations when its representatives appeared at the public hearing on H. R. 960, the bill which would extend the classified civil service to all nonclassified employes through noncompetitive exams.

"This association feels that the best interests of the Government would be served by the granting of a noncompetitive examination to all nonclassified employes, in view of the fact that economy, the present watchword, will be conserved, and that the giving of such a noncompetitive examination will keep in the Government service people who have already proven their aptitude for the work . . ."

Speaking of the economy side of the picture, the association said that a reading of the hearings on H. R. 2700 shows that approximately 14½ people would apply in an open competitive examination for each job now filled by an emergency employe. The total number of applicants applying for all the nonclassified positions would approximate 4,350,000, at a cost of about $2 to $3 for each applicant. "Mr. Yaden (James G. Yaden, of the C. S. C.) stated on October 28, 1934, that the cost of giving competitive examinations would be exorbitant and that it would take five years to complete competitive examinations, which is as long as some of these nonclassified employes have already served the Government."

FURTHER, "if a competitive examination were given at this time, those who might qualify by means of a competitive examination would in no way be as well qualified for the position which they might ultimately fill; they have had no experience in the work, no matter how well they withstood the examination; hence their probationary period would be an added expense to the Government," it was added.

NOTE TO Federal week-enders: The dogwood in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park is expected to be in bloom this week-end and will probably last throughout the next ten days or so. Lee Drive, in the Fredericksburg Battlefield, and the various drives in the Spotsylvania Court House area are noted for the profusion of the flowering dogwood along the roadsides.

Among the recent retirements at the Government Printing Office were Wall E. Allen, 4450 Q street northwest, 20 years' service; Thomas F. Burke, 4411 South Sixth street, Barcroft, Va., 20 years; James H. Campbell, 1515 Eighth street northwest, 37 years; Matthias Harris, 4303 Elderon avenue, West Arlington, 15 years; George A. Johnson, 1706 D street southeast, 39 years; Albert Lindstrom, 2217 Shannon place southeast, 39 years, and John A. Patterson, 928 Quincy streset northwest, 41 years.

The new and up-and-coming WPA War Veterans Association will hold its first big meeting Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the hall at 414 Ninth street northwest. An entertainment program will follow the business session, according to S. N. Mullins, the secretary.

The West Virginia State Society holds its last dance of the season next Thursday night in the Raleigh Hotel. It will be the last until next October 19.

Bob Burns Says—

I always stop, like everybody else does, to watch one of them big steam shovels scoop up tons of dirt and fill a whole truck in only a few scoops. Why, I can remember when it took 20 men a week to do the same work that shovel does in a day. The one big word today is "efficiency." If you want'a get anywhere you got'a run your life the same way.

That's what my Uncle Sanky, who's a salesman, decided after he had almost lost his job 'cause he was always late for appointments. Finally one day he says to his wife, "That old wood stove and that old-fashioned ice-box with a pan to empty is the reason I'm always late. I've got a big deal with the Sampson Co. at 9 o'clock next Monday and I'm not goin' to be late. We're goin' to move into one of them new, small, efficient apartments." So they moved. Well, at 10 o'clock the mornin' of the big deal, Sanky's boss telephoned his new apartment and my aunt answered the phone.

The boss said, "Mr. Sampson has been waitin' for Sanky for an hour, and he's mad as a hornet! Tell him to hurry up and get down here."

My aunt says, "I'm awful sorry, but I don't think Sanky'll be down this mornin'. He had an extra piece of toast and we can't get him out of the breakfast nook."

Special Rites to Mark Church's 110th Year

Winchester, Va., April 14.—Special services have been arranged for each evening next week at the White Hall M. E. Church, in commemoration of the 110th aniversary of that congregation.

Dr. Harry Evaul, superintendent of the Frederick district, will be the speaker Sunday and on Monday the Rev. Mason A. Keesecker, pastor of Monroe Street M. E. Church, Baltimore, will speak. The Rev. H. M. Amoss is pastor of the church.

Her Majesty the Queen:

Elizabeth Was Attentive Pupil In Languages and Pianoforte

Teachers Remember Excellent Manners At Home and School

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

CHAPTER VI.

After Lady Strathmore had laid the first foundations of their education, French governesses came, with whom the children were not only supposed to talk, but actually always did talk French, so that by the time she was 10 Queen Elizabeth could speak it quite as fluently as English.

At last—for to children time passes slowly—one sad autumn morning came the long-dreaded separation—the agonizing wrench of David's departure to school. I came across a tear-stained letter written just after this sad event. "David went to school for the first time on Friday. I miss him horribly."

Queen Elizabeth is now an excellent letter writer, and I am told that her schoolroom essays were very good, but of her literary efforts as a child, unfortunately only one—a very early one—has been preserved. The other day she found in an old exercise book the beginning of an essay—or composition, as they used to be called. It was entitled "The Sea," and started: "Some governesses are nice, and some are not."

Read Other Languages

That was all.

Queen Elizabeth passed the Junior Oxford examination, but after she reached the age of 14 schoolroom routine at Glamis was too much shattered by the irregularities of life in wartime to allow of her entering for any more examinations. Neither was it possible for her to go abroad to undergo the process quaintly called "finishing." But she read a great deal to herself in French and German as well as in English, and when in London always took lessons in music and in dancing, both of which she loved.

This is an excellent likeness of Elizabeth when she was the Duchess of York, taken a short time after her marriage

Wartime Shattered Learning Routine At Age of 14

Mme. d'Egville, whose dancing classes she attended, remembers her as one of her most "graceful and intelligent pupils," and in 1917 her music mistress, Mme. Matilde Verne, wrote the following recollections of her:

"My first remembrance of the Duchess of York is of a very pretty, vivacious little girl dancing into the room, throwing her arms around her mother's neck and crying: 'Oh thank you, Mummie, thank you!' and then to us all: 'My mother is always so kind.'"

"Shortly afterward she and her brother David both became pupils at my newly opened Pianoforte School, and very intelligent pupils they were. Lady Elizabeth had a very good ear for music and learned quickly, so at the end of six months she was actually able to play at the children's concert. My sister, who gave the first lessons, writes about this:

"'The Duchess remembers this concert well (she told me so when we went to see her the day before she was married), because she "got out" in her piece and was ashamed. But she must have been "star" performer, for she played last and it was always my custom to put the best player at the end of the program. She also sang very prettily. She was a dear little girl. I used to lift her on and off the piano stool oftener than was necessary just because she was so nice to take hold of.

"'I myself remember a funny little incident in connection with this concert. Just before it all the children had extra practice with an assistant teacher. One day, in what we called the Paderewski Room, I heard someone being taught an exercise that all pupils, old and young, detest. It seemed to me that the struggle was going on too long, so I went into the Torture Chamber, and found that little Elizabeth was the victim. "We have only just begun," said the teacher firmly.

Teacher Devoted to Child

"'I looked at the child. Though reverent in face, there was a warning gleam in her eyes as she said to the teacher, "Thank you very much. That was wonderful," and promptly slid off the music stool, holding out her tiny hand in polite farewell. She always had perfect manners. I am glad to remember that she was easily coaxed back to the piano, and that the practice lesson ended happily.

"Later on, when I gave her lessons myself, she had grown into a most fascinating girl. The charm of her simplicity, her impulsive, warm-hearted manner, the innocent expression in her lovely eyes, are beyond my powers of description.

"'I gave her her last lessons at Glamis six months before her engagement was announced. She was then more serious than usual, owing I think partly to the fact that Lady Strathmore had been very ill and she had helped, with the most unselfish devotion, to nurse her.'"

Very soon after the Queen's marriage Mme. Verne went to tea with her, and her first curtesy was interrupted by her old pupil exclaiming, "You must give the Duke of York some lessons. I have already begun to teach him his notes, and he knows three!"

Ruhland Favors Change in Titles At Gallinger

Whether changing titles of the chief resident physicians at Gallinger Hospital would affect the agreement between Washington medical schools and Health Officer Ruhland as to division of power at the municipal institution was discussed by local leaders yesterday as Dr. Ruhland announced his support of the change.

Both Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, who introduced a bill to give the physicians the title of "chief medical officers," and Dr. Ruhland declared only civil service ratings were involved.

"At present the five doctors have no civil service status and are virtually in the position of glorified interns.

"On the other hand, chief medical officer is a title recognized by civil service," the health officer asserted. "I do not see that changing titles to make a rating possible would in any way affect the agreement we have reached."

Woman Indicted In Slaying of Her Son-in-Law

Mrs. Mallie Vincent, 46, of Seat Pleasant, Md., yesterday was indicted for the murder of her son-in-law, Michael Mattia, 35, last Saturday.

The murder indictment against Mrs. Vincent was one of 50 true bills returned by the Prince Georges County grand jury.

Mrs. Vincent has been held in jail since the fatal shooting.

Mrs. Vincent Is Indicted In Slaying

Prince Georges Grand Jurors Report 51 True Bills

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
42 University Rd., Calvert Hills, Md.
Telephone GReenwood 3559.

The Prince Georges County Grand Jury recessed yesterday after returning 51 indictments. The jury will reconvene April 24 to present its report on conditions in the county. The grand jury report is expected to touch on the Corinna Loring murder and the Mary Brown kidnaping case, details of which have been presented to the jurors.

By court order, only those indictments which concerned persons actually under arrest were released.

They were as follows: Mrs. Mallie V. Vincent, murder; James Robinson, larceny; Edgar Brooks, larceny and receiving stolen goods; Susie Dent, larceny and receiving stolen goods; James Murphy, alias Lovelace, forgery; James Wade, larceny of chickens; Elwood Day, assault with intent to kill; Girold Randall and John Bullock, larceny, receiving stolen goods and housebreaking; Samuel Billard, assault with intent to rape; Edward J. Grainy, assault with intent to kill and assault and battery; Marlie B. Daughterty, assault with intent to kill.

Form K. of C. Council

Hyattsville.—With 77 members signed Thursday night, a charter for a new Knights of Columbus council for Metropolitan Prince Georges County has been assured, T. Raymond Burch, temporary secretary of the council, said last night.

The number attending the organization meeting at St. Jerome's Church hall was considerably more than needed to obtain a charter. The council will include men from St. James' Church, Mount Rainier; Holy Redeemer Church, Berwyn; St. Jerome's and other nearby parishes.

A charter will not be applied for until after the next meeting, at St. Jerome's Hall, at 8 p. m. April 21. Burch predicted that 100 members would be in the council when the charter is obtained.

Edmonston Race Seen

Edmonston.—The possibility of a contest for every one of the three offices to be filled at municipal elections here May 1, was seen this week. Three persons already have announced they will run for as many offices, and it was believed each would be opposed.

Kinjiro Matsudaira, mayor in 1927, has filed as candidate for councilman from the second ward in opposition to W. W. Lewis, incumbent, who is expected to seek re-election.

Mayor A. E. Bost and First Ward Councilman James W. Maximow also will run for re-election. The town council will hold a special meeting April 15 to pass on all petitions of candidacy and to draft election notices.

Real Estate Board to Meet

College Park. — The Prince Georges County Real Estate Board will meet at a luncheon meeting at Lord Calvert Inn here Tuesday to adopt a code of ethics for the real estate dealers in the county.

The code was drafted by the executive board. R. W. Watkins is president, T. Raymond Burch, vice president, and Frank Cowell, jr., secretary-treasurer. Other members are L. W. Dunn and A. H. Seidenspinner. The board this week constituted itself an appraisal committee, which will, at the request of any interested persons, appraise real estate in the county.

Democratic Rally

Riverdale — Representative Sasscer, State Senator Charles C. Marbury, the members of the county's delegation in the State Assembly, and the county commissioners have been invited to attend a rally here at Town Hall Tavern Wednesday. It will be sponsored by the Twenty-first District Democratic Club.

94th Birthday, Recites

Westernport, Md., April 14.—Mrs. Harriet A. Blocher was honored with a party yesterday on her ninety-fourth birthday, with her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Wilt, as hostess. Mrs. Blocher gave a reading, "The Blackberry Girl," which she memorized in school 85 years ago.

Philip M. Huck Takes Oath As Takoma Park Councilman

Little Opposition Expected in Town Caucus To Renomination of Col. A. L. Conger and Millward C. Taft for Another Term

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post.
9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Philip W. Huck, 27 Pine avenue, Takoma Park, has been sworn in by Mayor John R. Adams to fill the vacancy on the town council caused by resignation of Dr. Chester C. Waters.

A resident of Takoma Park for 35 years, Huck is former president of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department and is now a trustee of that organization.

With the town caucus set for Monday night at the Fire Hall, little opposition is expected in the nomination of Councilmen Col. A. L. Conger and Millward C. Taft, whose terms expire May 1, when the town election is held. It is expected that Huck will be a candidate for the election.

According to the town charter, the three councilmen will serve two years with no restriction on their residence except that it be within the incorporated town.

If Gov. O'Conor signs the bill passed by the Maryland General Assembly changing the town charter, the three councilmen elected will serve only one year, so that all town officials, including the mayor, come up for election in 1940.

The vacancy on the council occurred when Dr. Waters left for St. Paul, Minn., where he was transferred by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Registration days for new voters have been set for April 25 and 26 at the firehouse, Carroll avenue, from 8 a. m. until 6 p. m.

Forgery Hearing Continued

Rockville.—Preliminary hearing on charges of procuring forgery and uttering against Charles Clark Coupard and Bernard Day, of Rockville, were continued yesterday by Judge Harold C. Smith in Montgomery County Police Court. The defendants are represented by former State's Attorney James H. Pugh.

Police charged that the pair induced a woman friend to pose as Mrs. Day and sign a mortgage for a $1,000 loan on Day's property in order to get funds for a trip to the World's Fair in New York.

Road Action Urged

Woodside Park.—Representatives of the Woodside Park, Woodside, North Woodside-Montgomery Hills and Linden Civic Association, the Silver Spring Business Men's Association, and the District of Columbia branch of the American Automobile Association met last night at the home of Allen H. Gardner to launch a drive for immediate acquisition of the right-of-way necessary for extension of Sixteenth street to Georgia avenue.

The meeting supported a resolution adopted this week by the Woodside Park Civic Association, which urges the Board of County Commissioners and the Maryland State Roads Commission to "make arrangements speedily to discourage construction in the path of the contemplated project and to acquire at once . . . the required land."

The proposed extension, it was pointed out, is being jeopardized through erection of new homes in the path of the right-of-way. Further delay in acquisition will probably increase the cost to an enormous degree, the resolution asserted. The improvement has been indorsed by the Montgomery County Civic Federation and the county commissioners, and was recently included by the State Roads Commission in its recommendation for the 1939-40 construction program.

Church Amateur Contest

Woodside—An amateur contest will be held in Woodside Methodist Church tonight at 8 p. m. under the sponsorship of the Young People's Society of the Church. Tomorrow at 11 a. m. the pastor, the Rev. Ralph Dela Smith, will preach on "Forward With Christ." At the evening service at 8 p. m., there will be a service of dedication to the work of men, with the address by Dr. Jacob Payton, editor of the National Methodist Press.

Building Inspector Authorized

Garrett Park—Establishment of the office of town building inspector and appointment of Lester F. Wilkinson to the post has been authorized by the Town Council. Permits will be issued only after consideration by the building committee of the council and the approval of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Mrs. Mullinix Rites Held

Damascus.—Funeral services for Mrs. Betha E. Mullinix, 69, who died Wednesday at her home near here after a long illness were held yesterday from the M. E. Church at Damascus, with the Rev. Raymond Hunter Brown, pastor, officiating. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Mullinix is survived by her husband, Sebastian M. Mullinix of Damascus; a daughter, Miss Helen E. Mullinix, librarian at Leland Junior High School, Chevy Chase; a son, Day Mullinix, a member of the faculty at Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring; and two sisters, Mrs. Muller Walker of Washington, and Mrs. Charles Crown of Florida.

Lions to Hear Mahoney

Silver Spring.—Claude A. Mahoney, White House correspondent for the Wall Street Journal, will address the Silver Spring Lions Club Tuesday at a dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. at the Indian Spring Country Club. Plans will be completed for the club's annual charity ball to be held April 29 at the Manor Club in Norbeck, Md.

Arlington Sets Trailer's Stay At 60 Days

New County Law Also Puts Restrictions On Tourist Camps

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0500

The county board yesterday adopted an ordinance which sets a limit of 60 days for parking a trailer in Arlington County.

C. R. Mateer, who operates a trailer camp near Rosslyn, appealed to the board stating he had been a resident of Arlington County for the 30 years and claiming such action unfair. He predicted it would ruin his business.

The ordinance prohibits any tourist or trailer camp in Arlington County unless a permit is obtained. Applications must be made in writing to the county manager. It restricts the location of these camps including a provision that none shall be within 300 feet of the right of way of the following highways: George Washington Memorial Parkway, Four Mile Run Parkway, North Glebe road, North Kirkwood road, North Lincoln street, North Nelson street, North Quincy street, North Randolph street or North Stafford street.

All tourist or trailer camps are required to maintain a register of all camp occupants.

Deny Sewer Lines Extensions

The board unanimously voted against extending sewer lines into Fairfax County, or to permit lines constructed by others in Fairfax County to connect with the Arlington County lines at this time.

The action, moved by William A. E. McShea, adopted the recommendations of a special committee composed of County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas and Sanitary Engineer Richard M. Wirt.

The committee suggested that the Arlington County Board immediately communicate with the mayor and council of Falls Church, the Fairfax County Boar dof Supervisors and the city council of Alexandria, setting forth that Falls Church has no right under any contract with Arlington County to empty any sewage originating beyond the limits of the town into the county lines. The committee also recommended that Arlington County reserve the right at any future time, whenever in its judgment the capacity of the Four-Mile Run trunk line is approached or for other reasons sufficient, to refuse to transmit through its lines any sewage except that of Falls Church as covered in contract under date of June 14, 1935.

1938 Auto Tags Dead Today

Arlington—Motorists are warned that today is the dead line for use of 1938 automobile tags. Operators or cars travel over the highways after today at their own risk as State police say there will be no extension of time allowed.

Government Students Set Anniversary

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the National Popular Government League, established "to democratize our political machinery, and establish the control of government by the people," will be celebrated at a dinner in the Raleigh Hotel Saturday, April 29, at 7 o'clock. Current problems will be discussed by nine Government officials and legislators, whose speeches will be controleld by electric "Stop" signals in order to fit them into time allotted.

Edward Keating, former Representative from Colorado, chairman of the executive committee of the league, will be toastmaster. The invocation will be said by Mgr. John A. Ryan. Robert L. Owen, former Senator from Oklahoma, will discuss the reasons for a popular government league in 1913, and now.

Seven-minute statements will be made on various current problems, as follows: Mary Anderson, director Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, "Working Women and Children in a Democracy;" John M. Carmody, administrator Rural Electrification Administration, "The Economic and Cultural Significance of Electric Farm Co-operatives;" Senator Hill, of Alabama, "Flood Control and 'States Rights;'" David E. Lilienthal, director Tennessee Valley Authority, "Going Ahead;" Frank R. McNinch, chairman Federal Communications Commission, "Making Power History;" Paul H. Todd, chairman Michigan Public Utilities Commission, "How State Legislatures are Controlled;" Representative Voorhis, California, "The Bill of Rights 150 Years After."

There will be a message from William Allen White, of Emporia, Kans., the first showing in Washington of the new TVA motion picture, "Wasted Waters," and a talk by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, "Conservation—Today and Tomorrow."
